Burke Moves To Question Black on His Nomination

Will Request Committee to Invite Senator to Public Hearing.

Borah May Defer Fight on Alabaman

Judiciary Group Expected to Report Selection Favorably Today.

An Editorial—Page 8.

By Russell Smith.

After a day of intense activity by opponents of the Supreme Court nomination of Senator Hugo Black, Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, announced yesterday he will request the Judiciary Committee today to set a date for hearing on the nomination and to invite Black to appear.

On the pro-Black side of yesterday's ledger, however, was indication by Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, that he will not attempt to hold up Black's nomination in the Judiciary Committee today.

The view was general, however, among friends and foes of the nomination alike, that it will be reported favorably today. It is expected it will lie over, under traditional Senate procedure, until tomorrow when an executive session to begin consideration is expected.

Promises "No Hearing."

Chairman Henry F. Ashurst, of the committee, said last night, with force, that "there will be no hearings" and that the committee will report favorably on the nomination today.

He estimated there "might be 10 or 15 votes" against Black when the Senate roll is called.

"In the present excited condition of the country, mark you," said the Arizonan, "it would be outside the realm of possibility to nominate a man who would receive unanimous approval."

Bloc Unimpressed.

A heavily outnumbered Senate minority, however, remained unimpressed by this view. It was led by Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican) of New Hampshire, a freshman Senator who, he said, has not "been here long enough to learn all the intricacies of senatorial courtesy."

Bridges said conferences went on throughout yesterday among opponents and that a thorough investigation is being conducted by individual members who dislike the Black nomination.

A major topic interesting these researchers was what part, if any, was played by the Ku Klux Klan in the election of Black to the Senate

Cat-Like Intruder Assaults Woman In Chicago Hotel

Chicago, Aug. 15 (AP).—Miss Virginia Austin, 25, was struck with a brick and criminally attacked early today in a Loop hotel by a colored man police believed responsible for a series of similar attacks.

The man mounted a fire escape and crawled along a narrow coping to Miss Austin's fourth-floor room, police said. The attack was the second reported at the hotel within a year.

Miss Austin, who told police she came here June 4 from her New York home, was treated for a gash on her left temple. Five suspects were arrested.

Flier Found Dead, Hands, Legs Bound

Colorado Springs, Aug. 15 (AP).—A man identified as Ralph H. Ramsey, 35, an aviator, was found dead today with his hands and legs bound and his body lying beneath the exhaust pipe of an automobile.

A leather traveling bag lay over his face. Police Chief H. D. Harker said the bag apparently had been ransacked. Ramsey's pockets contained 69 cents.

Blonde Linked With 11 Deaths In Poison Case

Mrs. Hahn Reasserts Her Innocence as Police, G-Men Confer.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Aug. 15.—Police surveyed a list of 11 deaths covering eight years tonight, and said "they all lead directly or indirectly to Anna Hahn." Three mysterious illnesses also were under scrutiny.

At the same time, police reported uncovering evidence that indicated Mrs. Hahn had "bought enough poison to kill half the town."

Mrs. Hahn, held since Tuesday and charged with the poison slaying of George Gsellman, 67, declared her innocence.

Assistant Prosecutor Frank J. Gusweiler announced he would present to the grand jury "evidence in more than one case."

Names of only five of the 11 victims have been made public.

They date from that of Ernst Kohler, elderly teamster, who died in 1933, to George Obendoerfer, well-to-do cobbler, who succumbed in a Colorado Springs hospital August 1. Kohler, whom Mrs. Hahn identified as an old friend of her father in Germany, bequeathed to her his $12,000 home.

Besides Gsellman, found dead in bed July 6, the list also includes Albert Palmer, 72, and Jacob Wagner, 78, who died in March and June of this year, respectively.

Assistant Prosecutor Gordon Scherer was in Washington to seek the aid of J. Edgar Hoover in the investigation.

Of the five identified fatalities, Mrs. Hahn has admitted, Schattle said, that she knew four, and had ministered to them in their illnesses. She denied knowing Gsellman. Police said, however, a friend of Gsellman had identified her as the woman with whom Gsellman was seen the night before he was found dead.

Interviewed as she sat down to breakfast today in Hamilton County jail, Mrs. Hahn said:

"Down in my heart and mind I know I am innocent of this horrible crime."

Inspector A. J. Headley Dies of Heart Attack

Albert J. Headley, 67, former inspector of police, who rose from a bicycle policeman to become one of the ranking officers of the force, died of a heart attack early today at his residence, 217 Ninth street southwest.

Headley was retired about a year ago. He headed the traffic bureau in the earlier days of the automobile.

Americans in Line of Fire Thrilled by Shanghai Battle

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Aug. 15.—War to Chinese and Japanese here meant adventure to Americans—some of it thrilling, some tragic.

Ten members of an Oriental tour party caught in the conflict sorrowfully prepared to depart home Thursday without their leader—Dr. Robert K. Reicschauer, of Princeton University. He was killed by a bomb explosion.

Those who will leave aboard the Japanese steamer Tatsuta Maru are Leo Drey, of St. Louis; George Schanton, of Harbor Beach, Mich.; Jane Gastonn and Anthony Cornell, of New York City; William Verhage, of Mankati, Minn.; Alice McGinnis, of Boston; Paul Amos, of Princeton, N. J.; John Masland, of Philadelphia; Harlan Cleland, of Harwichport, Mass., and Dr. Robert Potter, of Fresno, Calif., now the leader.

"We are all O. K. and this is a great adventure, but I wish I were home," Amos said.

"The tour party moved to the Palace Hotel believing the Astor House unsafe," he said, describing the bombing.

"Most of the members were playing bridge, but I was walking along the Wangpoo River when I saw Chinese airplanes flying in battle formation toward the Japanese cruiser Idumoz.

"The Idzumo fired. I ran toward the hotel and a Chinese bomb landed 40 yards from me. Everything was chaos. The detonation was stunning. Huge slivers of glass fell to the street from windows.

"The street was lined with bodies, torn and mangled.

"I finally reached the hotel and learned by telephone that Dr. Reischauer was injured. Our party moved its luggage to the United States Consulate

Bombings Were Accident, Mme. Chiang Kai-shek Says

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Monday), Aug. 16.—Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, Wellesley-educated wife of the head of the Chinese government and army, today explained that Saturday's air bombing tragedy in Shanghai was due to bombs being loosed accidentally from Chinese planes damaged by Japanese anti-aircraft fire.

In a telegram to Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, jr., Mme. Chiang said her husband, "shocked and grieved," had ordered an investigation of the holocaust, in which bombs fell into international areas in Shanghai and killed 910 persons and wounded 1,200, nearly all Chinese. Three Americans were among the dead.

Yesterday Mrs. Roosevelt, a visiter in Shanghai, telegraphed Mme. Chiang, who is secretary-general of the national air forces, urging "as a sincere friend" that steps be taken to prevent a repetition of the tragedy.

"None deplore more than we the terrible, tragic, accidental dropping of bombs from two damaged airplanes," Mme. Chiang telegraphed. "The Generalissimo had ordered specifically that no bombs be dropped south of Soochow Creek (the non-Japanese part of the International Settlement).

"Our officers reported that anti-aircraft gunnery wounded both pilots and damaged the bomb racks, causing the bombs to be loosed.

"It is incredible that the belief exists that China deliberately bombed the International Settlement."

Mrs. Roosevelt, touring the Orient with her 19-year-old son, Quentin, had dined with Mme. Chiang in Nanking a few days ago. She was staying at the Cathay Hotel, which was badly damaged by the bombings, but escaped injury.

She entreated Mme. Chiang to prevent further loss of life, especially among Shanghai's hundreds of thousands of refugees.

Mattern Flies 2,600 Miles to Start Pole Hunt

Reaches Fairbanks on Way to Seek Lost Russian Airmen in Arctic.

By the Associated Press.

Fairbanks, Alaska, Aug. 15 (AP).—Jimmie Mattern roared his twin-motored plane into Fairbanks tonight. He completed a non-stop 2,600-mile aerial dash from Oakland, Calif., in 14 hours 10 minutes to join the widening search for the missing Soviet transpolar plane.

Seasoned fliers from both sides of the North Pole pressed toward the Arctic wastes in the search for Sigismund Levaneffsky and five other Soviet airmen missing since Friday in an attempted 4,000-mile hop over the Polar cap from Moscow to Fairbanks.

Alaska's noted "mercy flier," Joe Crosson, and two other pilots who flew fan-wise into Arctic Alaska yesterday in a preliminary search, stood ready to renew their efforts.

At least eight planes and two ice-breakers were believed rushing northward from Soviet territory on orders from their government.

1,600 Excursionists Quit Ship on Bar; Musicians Heroes

St. Louis, Aug. 15 (AP).—Tired and heavy-eyed after being stranded on a sand bar in the Mississippi River for more than 12 hours, 1,600 passengers of the excursion steamer President were taken ashore early today by tugboats after an all-night vigil.

The weariest of the passengers, however, were members of the steamer's orchestra, whose musical activities covered a period of 15 hours. The musicians were praised as the true martyrs of the eventful night.

While three tugboats puffed away the long hours in a fruitless effort to dislodge the $1,000,000 pleasure boat, its passengers danced, played cards, drank the beer barrels dry and enjoyed the moonlight night in comparative comfort.

A few of the more "jittery" passengers were rowed ashore by fishermen for $1 each.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Aug. 16.—The foreign office announced today Foreign Minister Koki Hirota had ordered the Japanese charge d'affaires at Nanking to close the Japanese Embassy and leave the Chinese capital at an opportune moment. Japanese consuls throughout China, and all Japanese at Canton, Chefoo and Tsinan were ordered to leave immediately.

Shanghai (Monday), Aug. 16.—The Japanese army launched a terrific land, sea and air attack on Shanghai at dawn today.

United States Marines and bluejackets began landing from the U. S. S. Augusta, flagship of the Asiatic fleet, to protect American lives endangered by the battle, and an emergency council of ranking United States authorities ordered immediate evacuation of all American women and children.

Nearly 4,000 Americans were among the thousands of foreigners imperiled as 20 Japanese warplanes roared across the city, bombing and strafing Chinese positions. Great guns of Japanese warships were pounding at Chinese front lines and strong reinforcements were landed from warships.

Fifty United States Marines and 50 bluejackets were rushed ashore from the Augusta as the fighting assumed major proportions. The reinforcements brought the number of American effectives guarding nationals in the International Settlement to 1,150.

American authorities acted swiftly on the decision to evacuate women and children. Messengers began immediately running from house to house notifying the Americans of the order issued by the emergency council headed by Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander in chief of the Asiatic fleet, and Consul General Clarence Gauss. The order also was broadcast by radio to all Americans in Central China.

But United States citizens were thrown into new dangers in their efforts to evacuate.

Two hundred Americans aboard a Dollar Line tender were on the verge of departing for the liner President Taft when they were caught in the cross-fire of the Japanese cruiser Idzumo, repelling an attack from Chinese air raiders.

The United States cruiser Sacramento was damaged by bombs dropped by Chinese planes attempting to bomb Japanese warships in the Whangpoo. The bombs fell 20 yards from the vessel. None was injured. Another bomb fell 100 yards from the U. S. S. Ramapo.

Britain, France and Germany acted to protect their nationals. The British destroyer Duncan landed a detachment of marines to bolster the international settlement guard; the French cruiser Lamotte Picquet moved into position directly opposite the French area to support French naval strength there.

The sudden Japanese attack, which spread terror through the city, added thousands of casualties

Rebels Smash At Santander Behind Barrage

2 Columns Sweep Leftists From Heights; Huge Air Bombers in Action.

By the Associated Press.

With insurgent armies at Soncillo, Santander front, Aug. 15.—Generalissimo Franco's long-expected drive against the government stronghold of Santander burst with full fury today, sweeping through a dozen towns in one of the most dramatic, grand-scale onslaughts of the entire Spanish civil war.

Many square miles were conquered as one insurgent column swept north from Aguilar de Campo while a second, supported by a division of cavalry, drove from Soncillo, a few miles to the east.

The Soncillo column was heading swiftly across country, aided by 24 tanks and a mechanized column, to join comrades at Reinosa and to attempt to trap large bodies of government troops between the two insurgent armies.

Few offensives in the war have equaled the spectacle created by the beginning of this drive Saturday.

Navy Will Have 44 New Ships By End of 1938

Construction Is Rushed as Britain and Japan Add to Sea Power.

By the United Press.

Heading steadily toward its goal of a sea power second to none by 1942, the United States Navy will complete 14 new war vessels during the remainder of this year and 30 more next year, latest figures on construction progress showed last night.

With the boom of cannon in China and Spain playing a possible prelude to war, the Navy's preparedness program finds 75 ships now under construction or contracted for, including the two great superdrednaughts North Carolina and Washington—35,000-ton ships which will carry 16-inch guns—whose keels will be laid at the New York and Philadelphia Navy yards as soon as possible.

The Navy is not yet able to announce when the two new battleships will be completed or where they will be assigned. The assumption is that they will join the Pacific fleet. Meanwhile, naval officers have served notice they will ask Congress next year for two more capital craft of this type, which cost about $50,000,000 apiece.

Latest Summary.

The Navy's most recent summary of comparative naval strength showed the following lineup of the three greatest powers on the sea:

	No. Ves. (Under-age)	Ton.	No. Ves. (Over-age)	Ton
United States	113	869,230	212	214,190
Great Britain	181	1,042,698	104	173,700
Japan	171	706,158	29	37,430

The "under-age" vessels are those now in fighting trim, less than 16 years old. That period was fixed as marking the useful age of a man-of-war under the London Naval Treaty which expired at the beginning of this year because of Japan's renunciation.

On July 1 The Navy also reported Great Britain was building 96 new ships to add 541,190 tons to her sea strength; the United States, 87 new vessels with a total of 335,565 tons, and Japan 23, with a total of 79,272—but the figures on Japanese building failed to show any construction under the new 5-year replenishment program, for which no information is available.

14 Vessels Launched.

As for the American building program, the 14 new vessels scheduled for completion this year already have been launched. They include:

One aircraft carrier, the Yorktown, with completion scheduled for October 1.

Two light cruisers, the Brooklyn, November 1, and the Philadelphia, October 1.

One submarine, the Pompano, October 1.

Ten 1,500-ton destroyers, the Craven, Fanning, Bagley, Blue, Helm, Mugford, Ralph Talbot, Henley, Patterson and Jarvis, the last-named due to be completed by December 1.

The South Boston delegation will include John S. McRae, Tucker C. Watkins, and State Senator William Tuck, president and chairmen of the distinguished guests and queen-and-maids committees of the National Tobacco Festival.

Early Sunday morning, accompanied by officials of the National Tobacco Festival, their wives, and a police escort, she and her chaperon will motor to Washington, where she will be the guest of the Cuban Embassy.

Capital Delegation Visits Military Park

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 15.—A group of several hundred residents of Washington, who are interested in history and nature, visited the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Military Park today. They were under the leadership of D. E. McHenry, park naturalist, of the National Capital Parks.

The group was welcomed here by Branch Spalding, National Park Service official. Showing the visitors through the park were William K. Howard, acting superintendent of the park; Ralph Happel, William Nance and James McRainey, members of the park historical staff, and R. P. Stevens, landscape engineer.

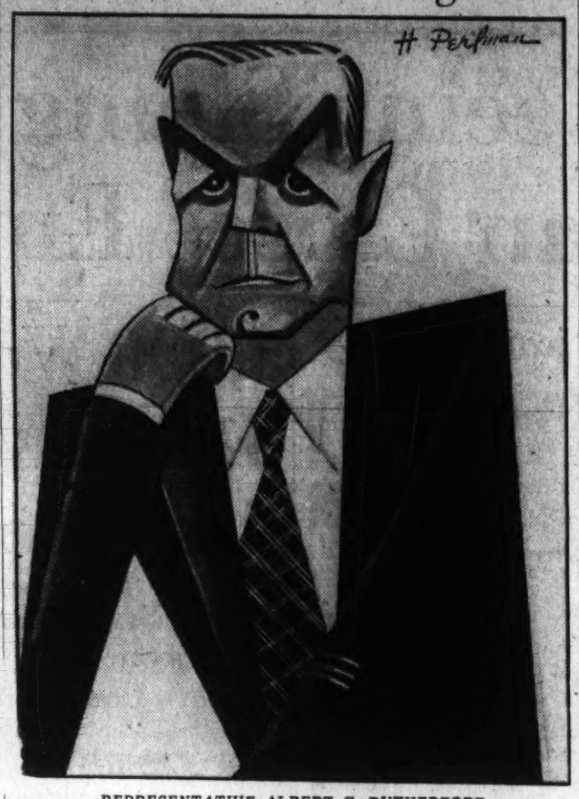
Filter Being Set.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Aug. 15.—Construction of the new rotary filter unit of the Waynesboro sewer project will be completed about November 1. The construction entails an expenditure of about $56,000 and is the largest filter distributor in this section of the country. With inside diameter of 145 feet, it will require 6,000 tons of crushed stone to fill the filter beds.

New Faces in Congress

Neglect Produced New Deal, Declares G. O. P. Legislator



REPRESENTATIVE ALBERT G. RUTHERFORD.

Rep. Rutherford Says Old Folks' Failure to Teach Present Generation About Constitution Set Clock of Progress Back 100 Years.

Because the old folk "took too much for granted" and failed to educate today's generation in the "blessings of our Constitution," they now reap the whirlwind of the New Deal and the "retrogression" it stands for, according to Albert G. Rutherford, Republican representative from Honesdale, Pa.

"But," he added with the patient smile of 58 years, "the country may be badly bent but it will straighten out despite the bought-and-paid-for victory of the President that set the clock of progress back 100 years."

The Canadian-born, lawyer-pred legislator, who decries the present "trend toward centralization in Federal and State governments," holds that "no man—no group of men—is able to run every phase of the country's affairs."

Biographical note: He was born in Watford, Ontario; was graduated from the Carbondale (Pa.) High School in 1895 and from the law department of the University of Pennsylvania in 1904. Admitted to the bar, he remained in practice until his election to Congress last November. In 1922 he won the Republican nomination for the State Senate but was defeated by his Democratic opponent in the finals.

Military background: He enlisted in 1904 in the Pennsylvania National Guard, became captain in 1908 and major and inspector in 1910. In 1917 he held the rank of major and advocate general and served as a lieutenant colonel of the Second Pennsylvania Reserve Militia in 1918.

Representative Rutherford is a member of Masonic bodies, Odd Fellows, Elks, Knights of Malta and Knights of Pythias, also seventh-degree Granger.

Apple Growers To Meet Today At Waynesboro

Central Virginia Group to Discuss Problems; Fall Yield Big.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 15.—Apple growers from Albemarle, Nelson, Rockbridge, Rockingham and Augusta counties will gather in Waynesboro tomorrow night for a meeting of the Central Virginia Apple Association, at which problems faced by growers and packers with the coming of the 1937 season will be discussed.

Frank Parker, of Waynesboro, is president of the association. Other officrs are: Vice president, Henry Goodwin, of Nelson County; secretary and treasurer, Leo Mehler, of Waynesboro.

Harvest of the record crop of fall and winter apples is expected to begin about September 15. Summer apple shipments from Albemarle and Nelson counties this year have been 50 per cent above those of 1936, according to one broker, and the prices received have been favorable, in view of the supply.

First apples to reach the market were the Early Harvest and Yellow Transparent varieties. Next came the Wealthy crop, the last of which will be moved this week, along with the first of the Rambos, Golden Pippins, Maiden Blush and Smokehouse pickings. By the weekend the first of the Grimes Golden will be harvested.

The summer crop in this section has been of little importance, compared to the large plantings of Winesaps, Pippins, Delicious, Staymens, Yorks and Jonathans.

Growers meeting tomorrow will discuss a marketing agreement, and plans for disposal of the record yield.

Wallis Windsor's Kin Found Dead

New York, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—Miss Hester Anne Warfield, 38-year-old nurse, said to be a distant kinswoman of the Duchess of Windsor, was found dead in her apartment today. Death apparently occurred last Wednesday. Police found a glass containing a white sediment on a night table beside the bed.

Coal Shippers Seek $300,000 In Rate Rebates

Action Against Va. Carriers Follows Tariff Cut by I. C. C.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 15.—Judgments of approximately $300,000 were asked by coal shippers and receivers in the area from Harrisonburg to Danville yesterday before Judge John Paul in United States District Court for western Virginia.

This amount is asked on the grounds that the Interstate Commerce Commission lowered the rates and the patries are entitled to reparations. The railroad companies contend that the I. C. C. did not have justification for lowering the rates and appealed to the district court.

Judge Paul was presented with a mass of evidence offered before the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the arguments yesterday were on points of law. The hearing was originally scheduled for Danville.

The Southern, Baltimore & Ohio, Norfolk & Western, Chesapeake & Ohio and the Virginian railroads are parties to the proceedings.

Robert Green Dies At Clarksburg, Md.

Robert Jones Green, 83, died yesterday at his home near Clarksburg, Md.

Mr. Green had lived near Clarksburg all his life, and for 20 years taught at the grade school in Clarksburg. He gave up teaching nearly 40 years ago to operate his farm there. His wife, the late Laura Crawford Green, died in 1926.

He leaves a son, Robert Crawford Green, and a daughter Mary Olivia Green, both of Clarksburg.

Funeral services will be held at the home tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

NLRB 'Another Way to Spell C.I.O.,' Says Holt

Senator Cheered by West Virginia Steel Men at Rally.

By the Associated Press.

Weirton, W. Va., Aug. 15 (A.P.).—Senator Rush D. Holt, West Virginia's anti-New Deal Democrat, bitterly attacked the National Labor Relations Board today at an outdoor rally of Weirton steel workers.

The Senator spoke on the eve of a board hearing on its complaint that Weirton Steel employed terrorism against the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Before a crowd of workers, mostly members of the Weirton Employes Security League," which the board calls "a company-sponsored organization," Holt declared:

"The National Labor Relations Board has been just another alphabetical way to spell C. I. O.

"The C. I. O. wants the National Labor Board to decide its cases not on the question of right or wrong, but on the campaign contributions of John L. Lewis.

"I am going to do all in my power to see that . . . the board conducts its activities in West Virignia fairly and honestly."

Before the rally, a 2-mile-long parade of Weirton workers marched four abreast through the town to the grove at the city limits where Holt spoke.

The crowd cheered wildly when Holt declared:

"I am now preparing much data on the whole setup, and unless there is a change for the better in the National Labor Relations Board . . . I intend to present the facts to the United States Senate in the next session and ask that body for an investigation of the board."

Await Rubber Inquiry.

Gadsden, Ala., Aug. 15 (A.P.).—This industrial city, scene of outbreaks of labor violence, awaited today an official inquiry into charges and countercharges of "terrorism" made by the United Rubber Workers and Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

Hearing of a formal complaint issued against the company by the National Labor Relations Board was set for Thursday.

The complaint charged the company with "acts of terrorism" in an attempt to prevent unionization of its employes. The company retorted that the union resorted to "coercion, intimidation and terrorism" in its membership campaign.

Delegates Picked By Loudoun G.O.P.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Purcellville, Va., Aug. 15.—Loudoun County Republicans, in mass meeting here yesterday, passed resolutions deploring attempts to tear down the Constitution and its defender, the Supreme Court, the ethics to set up a one-man power, to establish a dictatorship, overthrow home rule and individual State rights. They favored a balanced budget by the Federal Government.

Delegates to the State convention in Richmond on August 28 are: Henry Piggott, C. M. Page, J. E. Divine, Fenton Piggott, L. P. Hickman, Russell Sexton, Mrs. M. S. Reed, J. H. Lawrence, Osborne Myers, N. C. Nichols, H. F. Pancoast, A. M. Janney, Shirley Piggott, Mrs. N. C. Nichols, Miss Mary E. Nichols, H. B. Taylor and A. W. Hoopes.

Alternates are: J. Graham Carson, T. W. McCann, John Divine, R. N. Legard, John Abel, M. H. Yakey, Harry Furr, Frank Pearson, F. D. Paul, Mrs. Emma Willard, T. S. Fenton, J. V. Nichols, Mrs. A. W. Hoopes, Mrs. Hanna Piggott, W. E. Furnas, George H. Page and H. L. Gregg.

Shirley Piggott presided at the meeting. N. C. Nichols is secretary.

Albemarle G.O.P. Elects Delegates

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 15.—At a mass meeting of Republican voters of Albemarle County, held in the courthouse, and presided over by Lieut. Col. Henry B. Goodloe, the following delegates and alternates were elected to attend the Republican State convention in Richmond, August 28:

Delegates — Chairman, Goodloe; Mrs. George H. Whitten, Carter Graves, Ernest R. Duff, J. W. Patterson, C. W. Head, W. E. Fowler, Thomas W. Jarman, C. W. Houchens, Mrs. Henry Gibbs, Arthur H. Lloyd, Dr. W. A. Kyger, and W. B. Jones.

Alternates—Mrs. Marie C. Goodloe, Purvis Whitten, A. K. Wyant, Miss Georgia S. Goodloe, R. L. Thacker, H. L. Simmons, J. W. Hensley, Mrs. Thomas W. Jarman, E. L. Sandridge, John Gibbs, James L. Humbert, D. L. Sandridge, and John Downer.

The call for the mass meeting, issued by Chairman Goodloe, read: "All legal qualified voters of the county, regardless of past affiliation, and who are in accord with the principles of the Republican Party, are invited to unite under this call."

Sen. Wagner's Son In Assembly Race

New York, Aug. 15 (A.P.).—Another "Young Bob" is starting out in his father's political footsteps.

Robert F. Wagner, jr., son of the junior Senator from New York, has filed as a candidate for Assemblyman from the same sixteenth district which his father served 20 years ago.

Robert F. Wagner, sr., was 28 years old when he first sat in the New York Assembly in 1905.

Bob Wagner, jr., if elected in November, will reach Albany a short time before his twenty-eighth birthday in April.

Chances are that he will be elected. He became the Democratic nominee, without opposition, in a district that has voted Democratic ever since Wagner the first was elected there.

Auto Accidents Kill 6, Hurt 12 In Capital Area

D. C. Man Dies After Car Hits Parking Strip and Turns Over.

Six persons were killed and more than a dozen injured in automobile accidents in and near Washington during the week-end.

An unidentified woman, struck by a street car at Fourth and D streets northwest, died last night, a few hours after the accident. The death brought the traffic toll to 68 for the year.

Physicians at Gallinger Hospital, where she was transferred from Emergency, said her skull was fractured and she had internal injuries.

Traction officials said the motorman of the car was W. H. Spalding, of 2711 P street northwest.

Private Chester Hackney, 28, a soldier from Fort Washington, was fatally injured when he fell from an automobile driven by Joseph Richardson, a postal employe. The accident occurred on Silesia road, in Maryland, police said. The soldier was pronounced dead on arrival at Casualty Hospital.

Eugene M. Lowry, 17, 3925 McKinley street, died yesterday in Georgetown Hospital of injuries received Saturday when his automobile struck a parking stip in the center of the street at Wisconsin avenue and Langrum lane, Bethesda, and turned over several times.

Two deaths occurred in nearby Virginia as the result of auto accidents. M. E. Ellington, 59, Fredericksburg, was killed and five persons injured when the auto in which they were riding crashed into the rear of a parked truck on a Fredericksburg street.

Ellington died before police could extricate him from the wreckage. He was employed in a manufacturing plant in Fredericksburg and was the father of a large family. Four of the injured were the victim's sons.

Other Driver Arrested.

John H. and James H. Ellington, 5-year-old twins, suffered scalp wounds and Earl Ellington received a broken leg. Harvy Ellington, 16, the other son, suffered a broken hip. All were admitted to Mary Washington Hospital.

Police arrested Ted Edwards, 22, also of Fredericksburg, as the driver of the machine, and charged him with driving under the influence of liquor.

Thomas Archer, 16, son of Harry Archer, of Burke, Va., died yesterday afternoon after being admitted to Alexandria Hospital suffering from fractures of both legs and a punctured lung.

Details were not available last night, but police said the car in which he was riding struck a heavy truck near Burke and overturned.

Marlene Cooper, George Washington student, who lives at Colonial Beach, died late Saturday night from injuries received when a car driven by Sylvan Schwartz, 26, 1317 Randolph place northwest, crashed into a culvert near King George Courthouse. Schwartz, a law student at Georgetown University, was in a serious condition in Mary Washington Hospital, Fredericksburg.

A 14-year-old boy, William Intellini, 4116 Illinois avenue northwest, received a fractured skull when he rode his scooter into a metal trash container, anchored in the concrete sidewalk in front of the W. B. Powell School at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest. He was taken to Garfield Hospital where his condition was regarded as serious.

Lawson Duckett, 19, colored, of Camp Springs, Md., was treated at Gallinger Hospital yesterday for cuts about the knee, received when the car he was driving struck a telegraph pole near Clinton, Md.

Injured by Truck.

Samuel Skofield, 21, colored, 831 Third street northwest, was taken to Casualty Hospital suffering from injuries to his left foot, suffered when a truck driven by Donald N. Burling, 28, Clarendon, Va., ran up on the sidewalk at Third and I streets northwest yesterday afternoon. Burling told police the door of the truck became unfastened and he lost control while trying to keep from falling out of the cab. The case is scheduled to be heard before the corporation counsel tomorrow.

Gladys Culp, 37, 1121 I street northwest, was reported in a fair condition yesterday at Casualty Hospital, where she was taken Saturday after being struck by a car driven by Carl Gorham, 1820 Fenwick street northwest. The accident occurred at First and L streets northeast.

Struck by a car on Mount Vernon boulevard near Highway Bridge late Saturday night, Robert Roberts, 56, of Alexandria, Va., was reported in a fair condition at Gallinger Hospital last night, where he was transferred from Emergency Hospital. Roberts suffered a compound fracture of the left leg and bad cuts and bruises.

Funeral Tomorrow For Brother Joseph

The funeral of Brother Beclan Joseph, 84, who died Saturday at Normal Institute, Ammendale, Md., will be held tomorrow at 9 a. m. in the chapel at Ammendale with burial in St. Joseph's Cemetery there.

A native of Brookville, Pa., Brother Joseph, whose family name was Michael S. Hossman, taught for many years in Catholic schools throughout the East as a member of the Christian Brothers. After retirement he returned to Normal Institute, where three years ago he celebrated his golden jubilee as a member of the Christian Brothers.

Village Oracle on Broadway, Trades News With Reporters

Best Country Newspaper Correspondent Up to Ears in Swank; Reveals He Gets Most Gossip From Women.

New York, Aug. 15.—Mister "Fin" Petrie, the oracle of Opal (population 40), Wyoming, was up to his ears in swank today.

Years ago when he landed in New York, a Scottish emgirant boy of 19, he bunked in an Eighth avenue boarding house. Today, his posts installed him in a Waldorf-Astoria suite 15 floors above Park avenue.

But, let "Fin" himself tell you about it. Writing for the papers was what brought him to New York. He won Country Home Magazine's third annual award for the best country newspaper correspondent with his salty column in the Kemmerer Gazette.

More Towels Than Home.

This week's column will be about New York. It says: "They gave the wife and I a bungalow, fitted out with more towels in the bathroom than we have at home. I even found a corkscrew attached to the bathroom wall, but failed so far to locateanything to put it in. . . .

"Met a swell bunch of newspaper reporters this afternoon, no more inquisitive than we are and, offered to buy them a drink, but all declined, that is, until my wife said, 'Fin will pay for it.' . . ."

The reporters, of course, talked shop and wanted to know how a country correspondent works.

How does he get his news?

"Well, if I hear a woman talkin, to another woman in the store (he runs a general store), I put it down. And I listen in on the telephone."

Is he bothered with publicity seekers.

"No. If anybody wants anything in the paper I throw it away to make 'em mad."

Is he bothered with the editor cutting his copy?

"If I swear, he does. He don't cuss. I do. If I say damn, he says dang or something like that."

Roosevelt Is His Man.

What does he write in the way of politics?

"Anything to knock the other man and help mine." (Roosevelt is his man, incidentally, because of a rise in the price of cattle and sheep, of which Opal expects to ship 1,100 cars this year.)

What are his recreations?

"Playing pool and going home at night to be with the wife."

"The wife" is with him. More interested in people than places, apparently. They want to see Jack Dempsey, Joe Louis, Mayor LaGuardia, Babe Ruth, President Roosevelt, Senator O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and J. C. Penney, the department store magnate, an old friend of Mrs. Petrie.

"And a strip-tease dancer," added Petrie, a lusty red-faced fellow with battleship gray hair and gold-rimmed glasses.

He was sorry to learn that the burlesque houses had been padlocked.

Jobless Painter Held As Infant Son's Slayer

Lynn, Mass., Aug. 15 (U.P.)—George Parks, 45, unemployed painter, tonight was charged with the murder of his infant son and assault with intent to kill his 6-year-old daughter in what police described as a double murder-suicide attempt.

Despondent over his failure to find work, Parks and the two children were found unconscious in a gas-filled bedroom by his wife late last night. George, jr., 18 months old, died. The daughter, Ann, was expected to recover. Parks, revived, was arrested.

Dr. Paiva Made Paraguay Head By Coup Leader

Franco Forced to Resign on Refusal to Form New Cabinet.

By the United Press.

Asuncion, Paraguay, Aug. 15.—Dr. Felix Paiva tonight was named Provisional President of Paraguay by Lieut. Col. Ramon L. Paredes.

Paredes forced Provisional President Col. Rafael Franco to resign because he refused to form a cabinet approved by the army.

Paredes led Friday's bloodless coup d'etat which placed the government of Paraguay in control of the military and forced resignation of the cabinet.

Following the resignation of Franco, Paredes issued a communique warning that the new government would consider any agitation against it as contrary to public security.

Paredes said all public offices will be filled shortly, and that a new constitution will be drafted.

Franco's resignation was a surprise, in view of the proclamation signed Friday by Paredes, stating the president would continue in office. Franco assumed the presidency after the revolt of February, 1936, which overthrew the liberal regime of Dr. Esebio Ayala.

Md. Vice Suspect Is Seized in Hotel

Wanted in Baltimore, where steps are being taken to indict him for pandering, Edward L. Bringley, 34, of Baltimore, was arrested at a downtown hotel here yesterday noon, on a fugitive warrant. His bond was later set at $10,000, which he failed to make. He is held at the First Precinct Station.

Police say that Bringley is one of the figures in Baltimore's sensational vice expose. He is already under indictment for violating the Mann act, his bond being set at $10,000. In Washington he is also charged with impersonating an officer, and bond was set at $800. The case happened some time ago.

Officers R. J. Cox and Guy Rone, of the Fugitive Squad, arrested Bringley yesterday. He had registered as George Wilson, they said.

According to detectives, the charge of impersonating an officer was placed against Bringley some weeks ago after he allegedly had forced women to pay him protection, claiming he was a police officer.

Jane Holt and Fiance Are Honored at Party

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 15.—Miss Jane Holt, a daughter of Dr. and Mrs. M. S. Holt, sr., of Weston, whose engagement to Ralph K. Chase, of Washington, D. C., was recently announced, was complimented at an informal party given last evening by Mrs. Holt, mother of the bride-elect, and Mrs. Donald Nance, this city.

The party was given at Oral Lake, where a number of Clarksburgers and out-of-town guests enjoyed swimming and dancing. An informal supper was served.

The guests included United States Senator Rush D. Holt, brother of Miss Holt, and Mr. Chase, Miss Holt's fiance, Washington, D. C.

WLW Used Experimental 500,000-Watt License for Profit, F. C. C. Charges

WLW Abused License, Radio Chief Charges

Demands Profits Account Accruing From 500,000-Watt Franchise.

In a letter charging abuse of an experimental 500,000-watt radio license, Federal Communications Commissioner George H. Payne yesterday called on Powel Crosley, jr., owner of giant Station WLW, Cincinnati, to give an accounting by September 13 of the station's operation and profits.

The Crosley Radio Corp. is the company which announced two weeks ago the employment of Charles Michelson, publicity director of the Democratic National Committee.

Angrily, Payne reminded Crosley that in course of an informal engineering conference of the commission he had requested certain data of Crosley, and that on Nov. 10, 1936, his office again requested such data.

Refused Lunch Invitation.

He continued:

"On June 30 I received from you an invitation to a baseball game and to 'a small informal lunch.' As I had never met you, the invitation and proffered 'good-fellowship' seemed unusual. When I recalled, however, that an official letter that I had addressed to you had remained unanswered for over six months, the problem became one not of gaucherie but of defiance of the law.

"I requested my secretary to decline your invitation . . .

"You said at the October 7, 1936 hearing that it was your policy 'to plow back into better service a large portion of the profits that might accrue from the improvement of that service' and 'that most of our profits have been plowed back into better and better programs.' You stated that you would furnish the details regarding this policy, but have failed to do so."

Insertion in Report.

"Immediately after my attempt to question you there was surreptitiously inserted into our annual report to Congress—a report that was never seen by any commissioner—a gratuitous and valuable advertisement of your station, confirming my impression that there was something strange in Denmark.

"Since I first attempted to obtain information from you about your station, the commission and the public have had the question of monopoly and favoritism brought officially to their attention in both houses of Congress."

These members, he added, were Senator Wallace White (Republican), of Maine, and Representative W. D. McFarland (Democrat), of Texas.

White's speech was devoted to consideration of whether radio stations "should not be declared to be public utilities and be subjected to a control in rates and practices to which they are not now amenable." The Crosley station was not mentioned specifically.

In McFarland's, however, Payne said, the Texan "called attention to the deplorable conditions now existing in the broadcast industry as far as the public was concerned, in which your company is prominently, but unfortunately not favorably, mentioned."

Raised Advertising Rates.

Payne continued:

"He said that upon receiving your experimental license to use a total of 500,000 watts power (an increase amounting to 450,000 watts) you immediately raised the price of your radio advertising time some 50 per cent and continued to collect handsome commercial profits on the basis of experimentation for those 39 months, a practice which you know is definitely prohibited by the rules of the commission * * *

"In view of those statements from such eminent authorities, it would seem to me that I have been very patient with reference to your failure to furnish the desired information."

In conclusion, Payne requested Crosley to submit to the commission before the deadline detailed financial data, including a balance sheet showing its investment, assets, liabilities and stock; a profit and loss statement; dividends declared; broadcasting hours sold; broadcasting time devoted to products of Crosley and affiliated companies; rates and increases in rates.

Escaped Convict Slain in Arkansas

Hot Springs, Ark., Aug. 15 (AP).—A raiding squad of State, county and city police shot to death here tonight a man they identified as Alfred Lamb, 26, escaped Texas convict, wanted on two charges of murder and several charges of robbery with firearms in that State.

The officers, two with machine guns, shot Lamb to death as they surrounded a house about a half-dozen blocks from the Hot Springs business district, where he and a woman registered about a week ago as "Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds."

A woman in the room with Lamb escaped injury. She gave her name as Pauline Reynolds, and was taken into custody.

Cost of Living Climbs 24% From 1933 Low

Though Average Is Still 11.4% Lower Than July, 1929.

New York, Aug. 15.—Living costs as a whole averaged the same in July as in June, according to the monthly survey of the National Industrial Conference Board. Increases in the cost of some of the component items of the budget were offset by declines in the cost of others. In July of this year, however, the cost of living of wage earners was 4.3 per cent higher than a year ago, and 24 per cent higher than in the spring of 1933, although still 11.4 per cent lower than in July, 1929.

Food prices declined 0.6 per cent from June to July, contrary to the usual seasonal movement, which is upward. In July of this year food prices were 2.2 per cent higher than in July, 1936, 43.5 per cent higher than in the spring of 1933 and 19.4 per cent lower than in July, 1929.

Rents continued on their upward trend, rising 0.6 per cent from June to July. This increase brought rents 11.5 per cent above the level of a year ago, 38.9 per cent above that of January, 1934, their low point, and 5.3 per cent below the level of July, 1929.

Clothing prices remained stationary, but in July they were 5.3 per cent higher than a year ago, and 26.7 per cent higher than in the spring of 1933, but 21.3 lower than in July, 1929.

Coal prices advanced seasonally 1 per cent from June to July, but they were slightly, 0.2 per cent, below the level of July, 1936, and 7.4 per cent below that of July, 1929. The cost of gas and electricity, which is ascertained as of January and July of each year, declined 0.6 per cent during the six months' interval, and in July of this year was 1.5 per cent lower than a year ago, and 10.4 per cent lower than in July, 1929.

The cost of sundries rose slightly, 0.1 per cent from June to July, bringing it to a level 2.6 per cent above that of July, 1936, and 7.4 per cent above the low point of 1933, and only 2.1 per cent below the level of July, 1929.

The purchasing value of the dollar was 112.5 cents in July, the same as in June, as compared with 117.4 cents in July, 1936, and 100 cents in 1923.

Mrs. Emma B. Levi, D.C. Resident, Dies

Mrs. Emma B. Levi, resident of Washington for more than 50 years, died Saturday at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Mary E. Gardner, 1407 Webster street northwest. She was 89.

A native of Fredericksburg, Pa., Mrs. Levi was the wife of the late William T. Levi, prominent contractor, who died 16 years ago. Surviving are her daughter, two grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at the residence Wednesday morning at 8:30 followed by requiem mass at 9 in the shrine of the Sacred Heart Church, Sixteenth and Park road northwest. Burial will be in Mount Olivet eCmetery.

Youth 'Escaping' From 'Iron Lung'

Beacon, N. Y., Aug. 15 (AP).—Birdsall Sweet, 19-year-old infantile paralysis victim, today won another round in his six-year fight to escape from an "iron lung."

Doctors "gave" him an extra hour and a half of daily normal life. Obliged for many months to spend 13 of every 24 hours in the Vassar Hospital respirator, Sweet started on a new schedule of breathing for himself from 9 a. m. to 9:30 p. m. every day.

Stricken in 1932, he began his comeback fight after 123 days in the respirator by emerging for four-hour intervals.

'Date' Experiment Is Success As Reform School Girl Weds

Oklahoma Institution Inmate Paroled to Store Clerk-Husband; Bridegroom's Uncle Performs Ceremony in 'Honor Cottage.'

By the Associated Press.

Tecumseh, Okla., Aug. 15.—A plump, 17-year-old honor inmate of the State Training School for Girls was married here today to her 21-year-old store clerk sweetheart of two years.

The clerk's uncle, the Rev. Elmer Birdsell, of the Tecumseh Church of Christ, united the boy, Hercule Cook, and the girl, Evelyn Steel, in a brief ceremony in the honor cottage at the school.

The marriage was the first to follow the institution's experimental "date night" held recently, when 38 honor girls were permitted boy friends at a party to give them social background.

The boy and girl met again after a separation of two years. Romance was renewed and the boy asked to marry the girl. Mrs. Creighton Burnham, school superintendent, after the wedding today, paroled the young bride to her husband.

The bridesmaid was an inmate of the school; the best man, a friend of the bride.

The bride wept as inmates, friends and the bride's parents gathered around the couple to wish them well.

Miss Florence R. Hirsch, Illinois State parole agent, attended the wedding and urged the girl to "make a good home, be a good wife and set a good example."

D.C. Man Is Found Dead Beside Track

George T. Jones, 30, carpenter living at 1424 W street northwest, was killed apparently by a Baltimore & Ohio train, sometime early Sunday, under circumstances which have not been entirely explained.

According to Helen Jones, his sister, he was planning to visit a man whom she knew only by the name of "Barnard." She believed Barnard lived near Brentwood, Md.

Mrs. T. A. Bowman, of Brentwood, saw Jones' body lying 30 feet from the railroad tracks early yesterday morning. Acting Coroner Hiram L. Wohlfarth, of Brentwood, said Jones had been dead about five hours and issued a certificate of accidental death.

Hay Fever Victim Escapes Pollen—But It's Difficult

Dawson, Nebr., Aug. 15 (AP).—William Stevens, of Dawson, explained today just how he fights hay fever sniffles and sneezes, but he said it takes determination to do it. His technique:

Takes all the furniture except the bed out of the room.

Wipes the floors carefully with wet cloths.

Hangs wet sheets in the bedroom in the evening, but takes them down an hour before retiring.

Keeps the doors and windows in the room locked, even though it's hot.

Washes the bed sheets everyday. This procedure, he said, rids the room of pollen and dust.

Minnesota 'War' Will Test Power Of Modern Army

Camp Ripley, Minn., Aug. 15 (AP).—A declaration of "war" tonight sent two soldier concentrations into last-minute preparations for the first phase of Fourth Army maneuvers that will pit mass manpower against motorized steel.

Divided into "blue" and "green" armies, 15,000 troops from Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota made ready to desert their 5,000 tents at dawn for four days of the greatest military exercise in the Seventh Corps Area since the World War.

The maneuvers will match the Seventh Provisional Division, or Blue Army, highly mechanized unit, with a new type "streamlined" command, against the "Green Army," or Thirty-fourth National Guard Division.

John B. Gray, Veteran of Md. Bar, Is Buried

Was Charter Member of State's Legal Group; Held High Places.

By the Associated Press.

Prince Frederick, Md., Aug. 15.—Relatives and friends filled St. Paul's Church to overflowing for the burial service of John B. Gray, sr., 84, one of the best-known members of the Maryland bar. Gray died Thursday.

The Rev. Durrie E. Hardin, rector of the parish, was in charge of the funeral rites, assisted by the Rev. H. G. C. Martin, rector of Ascension Parish, Westminster, Md.

The honorary pallbearers were Chief Judge Walter J. Mitchell, of Charles County; Judge W. M. Loker, St. Mary's County; Judge J. E. Mattingly, Prince George's County; State Senator J. Allan Coad, St. Mary's County; Judge T. Van Claggett, Upper Marlboro, and Willis Jones, Baltimore, former Assistant State Attorney General. The active pallbearers were Philander B. Briscoe, Biscoe L. Gray, Baltimore; J. Briscoe Bunting, J. Frank Parran, Benjamin Hance and Arthur W. Dowell, members of the Calvert County bar.

Gray was a charter member of the Maryland State Bar Association and was its president in 1918.

In 1904 he organized the Prince Frederick Bank of the Eastern Shore Trust Co., now the County Trust Co.

He was one of the oldest members of the University of Maryland Alumni Association, a graduate of the old Maryland Agricultural College. He was a vestryman of St. Paul's Parish. He was a member and past master of the Prince Frederick Masonic Lodge.

Gray was elected State's attorney in 1894, and in this office received his first training in criminal practice. He was president of the board of education of Calvert County and was counsel to the board of county commissioners from 1930 to 1934.

He was twice married, his first wife being Mrs. Kate Dorsey Gray, who died in 1916. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mamie Laveille Gray; three daughters, Mrs. Charles O. Clemson, Westminster, Md.; Miss Sadie L. Gray, Miss Marguerite Gray; three sons, John B. Gray, jr., George Brooke Gray and W. Dorsey Gray.

Veteran Is Dead

MAJ. WILLIAM WRIGHT.

Otis H. Gates, Of Agriculture Staff, Is Dead

Lawyer, Long Employe of Department, Active in Appalachian Club.

Otis H. Gates, 46, attorney in the Department of Agriculture and an employe of the department for 25 years, died last night at Homeopathic Hospital. He had been ill since May.

Mr. Gates entered the Department of Agriculture as a clerk at the age of 19. While working there he studied at George Washington University, receiving bachelor's and law degrees with other study at Cornell University.

He was a member of Blue Lodge of Masons, and for many years had been active in the Appalachian Trail Club of Washington, supervising the construction of many mountain shelters in the Blue Ridge and George Washington National Forest. Last summer he spent several weeks on a pack trip through the Sierra Mountains of California with the San Fransico Sierra Club.

He was a native of Cincinnati. His home in Washington was at 5400 Forty-first street northwest, with his mother, Mrs. M. G. Gates, and sister, Miss Stella Gates. Another sister, Mrs. Mabel G. Slattery, is also a resident of Washington.

Funeral services will be held from the home tomorrow at 2 p. m., with burial in Prospect Hill Cemetery.

Maj. Wright, Veteran of Two Wars, Is Dead

Burial Set Tomorrow in Arlington; Was Park Guard Inspector.

Maj. William Wright, U. S. A., retired, died unexpectedly Saturday at his home, 1653 Hobart street northwest. At the time of his death he was inspector of guards of the National Park Service, in which capacity he had served since 1925.

Maj. Wright was born in Illinois, December 12, 1870. He served as an enlisted man from 1889 until his retirement in 1914, when he was appointed guard in the State, War and Navy Building.

In 1917, he was commissioned a major for the duration of the World War, and was discharged in 1919. He then joined the guard of the National Park Service as sergeant, and was promoted in 1925 to the rank of inspector. He saw active service in Cuba, the Philippines and France, participating in many engagements. He was a member of the Spanish War Veterans and Retired Enlisted Men's Association, No. 1, for which latter society he served as quartermaster for many years. He left no close relatives.

Funeral services will be held at the Hines Undertaking Establishment at 1 p. m. tomorrow, followed by burial with full military honors at Arlington Cemetery.

Federal Agents Write Finis In Baker Fraud

24 Convicted in Nation's Greatest Swindle; Hero Just a Myth.

Philadelphia, it was announced yesterday by the United States postal inspectors, belongs to the Philadelphians and not the mythical estate of Jacob Baker, "Revolutionary War hero."

In writing "closed" 'at the end of one of the greatest swindle cases in history, the inspectors revealed that thousands of Americans were defrauded for many years, without possibility of reward, by racketeers who claimed the nonexistent Baker held title to $80,000,000 worth of property in the heart of Philadelphia.

Listed among the assets of the Baker estate were Independence Hall, Franklin Square, the grave of Benjamin Franklin, the United States postoffice, the United States Mint, the Broad Street Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad and the abutments of the Delaware River Bridge. In addition the mythical hero owned 11,000 acres of coal, lead, and zinc lands throughout the State.

Memberships Sold.

The scheme consisted of selling memberships in leagues pledged to have the will probated. Persons by the name of Baker or Becker were solicited for amounts varying from $1 to $50, "to have the will legalized."

A side racket was selling geneological charts to victims which demonstrated (for a price) their relationship to the dead hero, who was supposed to have received large grants for his services in the Continental Army.

The postal agents learned that 44 different associations had been operating the Baker estate racket at various times, one often replacing the other whenever trouble loomed.

24 Swindlers Convicted.

That a "will" existed, investigators soon found out. They got possession of it through court action and had its paper and handwriting analyzed. It was dated 1839. The paper was a type not manufactured until 1880, nearly 50 years after the alleged hero dated the document.

A check of wills bearing the name Baker or Becker showed that no one by the name ever had any title to the property mentioned. War Department records showed there never was a Revolutionary officer of the, name and Congressional records showed no land grants ever had been made to anyone of the name.

Twenty-five suspects were brought to trial. Evidence unearthed by the postal inspectors resulted in conviction of 24.

New Murals Dramatize Work Of Justice Department Agents

Activities of the Department of Justice, ranging from meat inspection to finger-printing, are dramatized in pictorial form in a new set of murals in the Justice Building. Painted in oils by Louis Bouche, New York artist, the canvases decorate the entrance to the Attorney General's office on the fifth floor.

The principal panels, one placed at each side of the doorway, are entitled "Law Enforcement" and "Supervision of Law." The former depicts a Justice agent handcuffing a criminal with the aid of a municipal policeman. In the latter group is a family of immigrants standing on a wharf.

On one wall of the vestibule are painted ten scenes symbolizing the fields covered by Justice officials. They include a radio-sending station, a railroad train, symbolic of public safety; a derrick, an industrial plant and a group of workmen representing labor and industrial matters; a water-front scene labeled "Interstate Commerce;" a national bank, a postoffice, a slaughterhouse and a Western scene standing for Indian lands and affairs.

The opposite wall shows the type of crime prosecuted by the department such as arson, alcoholic beverage violations, crimes on the high seas and on Indian reservations, kidnaping, espionage and racketeering. Life-size paintings of a lawyer and a judge stand at each side of the entrance to the vestibule.

The New York painter's designs are the sixth set to be completed in the Justice Building. Other murals have been done by George Biddle, John Steuart Curry, Henry Varnum Poor, Leon Kroll and Emil Bisttram.

Born in New York in 1896, Bouche studied in Paris for five years with Des Vallieres, Lucien Simon and other teachers in the Colarossi School and L'Ecole des Beaux Arts. Returning to this country, he continued his training at the Art Students' League.

His work is included in the permanent collections of the Metropolitan Museum, the New York University Gallery of Living Art, the Duncan Phillips Memorial Gallery and the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York. He has been represented in exhibitions here and abroad and has held several one-man shows.

He is a member of the American Society of Painters, Sculptors and Gravers, and of the Society of Mural Painters.

Roosevelt Quits In Battle for Wage-Hour Bill

Leaders Convince Executive Measure Doomed at This Session.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

President Roosevelt has been convinced by his House leaders his embattled wages-and-hours bill is dead and he will not insist upon action on the measure before Congress adjourns, it was reported last night.

A final blow will be dealt the bill today when Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), Texas, will offer a resolution proposing a House Labor sub-committee be directed to investigate the whole problem of maximum hours and minimum wages during the recess of Congress in preparation for revised legislation at the next session.

Snarled in Committee.

Dies is a member of the Rules Committee in which the wages bill is hopelessly snarled. He conferred with the President last week, and while he refused to discuss the topic of their talk, it was understood the pair reviewed the wages-and-hours fight which Southern conservative Democrats are leading in the Rules Committee.

Other Representatives who have talked with the President during the last week said last night that they got the impression that he is willing to let the measure go over until Congress meets again next January or earlier if a special session is called to enact farm legislation. Mr. Roosevelt, however, has persistently refused to discuss the wages-and-hours scrap at his press conferences.

If It's Death You're Avoiding, Don't Fear Torrid Months

Cold Weather of Winter More to Be Dreaded, Vital Statistics Disclose; Capital Also Revealed Healthy Spot.

One would never guess it from the conversation that buzzes over and about Washington during June, July and August, but the hot months are not the bad months in the District—if it's death you are avoiding.

The cold months of January, February and March are much more to be dreaded, according to the Vital Statistics Bureau. The death rate drops sharply in the city during the summer, the bureau's statistics show.

For example, 888 persons died in Washington in January. In June, the figure dropped to 683, and in July it was 699. Last August the number was 632. (Looks like Congress will have to think up some other reason for wanting to adjourn.)

Chance for Long Life.

J. B. Irvine, chief of the bureau that sooner or later makes out a certificate for every District resident' points out that the city's death rate is not a noticeably bad one—even when considered for the year round. The number of deaths here last year was 9.093, or 14.69 per 1,000 population.

Your chances of living to a ripe old age in Washington are better than they have ever been. From 1901 until 1905, the average age at which District men died was 41 years. Now it is 53 years.

Women have even a better record. Their average death age is 57 years. For colored women the average age at which death comes is 42 years. For colored men, it is 40½ years.

Dying is a much more complicated affair in the District than getting born. Irvine knows about each death within 48 hours. Births need to be reported only within 10 days. One certificate does at birth, but there must always be a death certificate and a burial permit.

If the funeral is planned for outside the District, a removal certificate is required.

Boys Outnumber Men.

While glancing over the birth records for 1936, Irvine decided it will not be many years before Washington hostesses can quit complaining about a lack of men. A total of 103 white boys were born last year to each 100 white girls. Among the colored groups, the ratio was 105 boys to 100 girls.

The lighter problem of making out just one birth certificate is made heavier by the fact that so many Washingtonians lose the proof of their birth. Come school days and it appears there have been fires all over the city.

"If we had as many fires as people try to claim when they come in wanting a birth certificate duplicate, Washington would not last many years," Irvine declared.

He believes, however, that the gorgeous new certificates being sponsored by the Census Bureau in an effort to make birth recordings uniform throughout the nation will have its effect.

He cannot believe that anybody is going to be careless with a certificate that looks like a bond.

Saint Dominic Sisters Depart for China

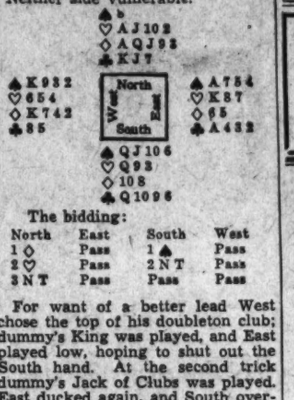
Contract

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

When a player's second bid is in a suit higher than his first bid, he has "reversed." When the effect of this reverse is to force on partner a choice of suits at the level of three, the reverse indicates a strong hand.

In the bidding of the hand below, North's rebid of two hearts asked South to bid three diamonds if his support for the two red suits was about equal. South correctly interpreted the show of strength and responded with two notrump, despite the fact that his hand at first glance seemed very weak. Thus encouraged, North went to a game which careful play brought home.

North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

For want of a better lead West chose the top of his doubleton club; dummy's King was played, and East played low, hoping to shut out the South hand. At the second trick dummy's Jack of Clubs was played. East ducked again, and South overtook with the Queen. The eight of diamonds was successfully finessed, and the ten of diamonds followed.

South now resisted the temptation to continue with the red suits and led, instead, the ten of clubs. East won, and shifted to a low spade. But the task of the defendant was hopeless. No matter what they did, South could enter his hand with the Queen or nine of hearts to cash the high club. The hearts would then be developed, yielding South three hearts, three diamonds and three clubs for his game.

Had South gone after the hearts before knocking out the Ace of clubs, East would have won the second heart trick (but would have refused to take the King on the first finesse). He would then have cashed his black Aces and put dummy in the lead with a heart. Dummy would have been obliged to surrender two more tricks to West—the King of spades and King of diamonds.

Mostly Human Interest

In those earlier and more dashing times, various nervy citizens were wont to go over the Niagara Falls in barrels, or else to threaten, for an exciting time, to go over the falls in barrels . . . Now, in these less kittenish days, comes report of how a big black bear went over the upper falls, 108 feet high, in the Yellowstone National Park . . . The bear did several barrel rolls in what must have been his unpremeditated adventure, the adventure being related by Uncle Sam's park rangers:

A party of visitors dashed excitedly into the canyon ranger station and reported seeing a bear swim into the Yellowstone River above the upper falls, shoot over the brink, then pick himself out of the wallowing spray at the bottom and hike off into the woods . . . The rangers accredited the story.

Helen Schmet-ler, president, Local 12, U. F. W. A., reports that Labor Department, as far as the union is concerned, is having promotion difficulties . . . Better jobs outside have cost the union the services of almost two dozen active members in the last six months . . . The president complains:

"Henry Lehman, our vice president, was lost to the N. L. R. B., and so was Norman Mathias and Bernard Stern, the chairman of our publicity committee . . . Lucian Koch, of our adjustment committee, we lost to the C. I. O. Shipbuilders' Union . . . Val Lorwin, chairman of the civic affairs committee, has left to join the Consumers' Guide in the triple A . . . Eleanor Nelson, our former president, has gone to the U. F. W. A. national office, along with Lewis Carliner and Elizabeth Buxsel . . . Leo Goodman left us to go with the C. I. O. Shoeworkers' Union, and now Government offices around town are dickering for the services of two other committee chairmen."

During the entertainment, a telegram was received by Ian Forbes, chairman of the social committee, inviting I. D. R. A. to attend the "Quest for Talent" contest at the Wardman Park Hotel Thursday evening . . . This particular night has been designated "Interior Night" in honor of the new association. There will be no minimum or cover charge to Interior employes that night.

5-Day Week

The N. F. F. E. has gotten Representative John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, to say a few words regarding his 5-day week bill, H. R. 1505: "It has seemed to be important in the past, and I am convinced that it is more important now than ever before, to place the Federal Government in the forefront as an enlightened administrator of personnel. When the Federal Government urges, or compels, industry to adopt a certain course in its relationship to its employes, the Government certainly should be able to point to itself as an example of progressiveness . . . The 5-day week is logical and sound. It is part, and should be part, of our newer and I am convinced more enlightened concept of employe relationships."

Retirements

Three employes of the Government Printing Office will be retired from service at the close of this month. One of these has 31 years' service. The three are Edward H. Fisher, 1715 Second street northwest, a compositor, 31 years' service; Ernest A. Hurdle, 718 Allison street northwest, make-up, 24 years' service, and Frank W. Kihlbom, 622 Elm avenue, Takoma Park, Md., a copy preparer, 24 years' service.

A. F. G. E. Notes—Wednesday is the "every member get a member" day . . . The local W. P. A. Lodge, No. 123, has elected G. V. Wickware as delegate to the Philadelphia convention . . . President Charles F. Sharkey and First Vice President Gail T. Judd have been elected convention delegates by Labor Department Lodge, No. 228; the alternates are T. J. Mead and Lawrence Brown . . . The national offive announces that A. F. G. 'Runs in Families,' Claims Scientist Of Appendicitis

By the Associated Press.

Appendicitis, one of the commonest human troubles requiring surgical treatment, is apparently a hereditary disease, a Midwestern scientist reported yesterday.

E. G. Stanley Baker, of Wabash College, Crawfordsville, Ind., announced in the Journal of Heredity that he had found that infection of the appendix, resulting in inflammation, soreness and rupture, "runs in families."

He found it running through four generations of one family, in which 12 cases occurred. A second susceptible family was found "without any escpecial searching," he added and a third was reported to the Journal simultaneously.

The trouble is not that a child is born with an infected appendix, the scientist declared. Instead, it inherits a predisposition to the disease in the same way that other persons are believed to inherit a predisposition to cancer.

Trial Board Split Delays U. S. Suit On Mellon Taxes

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

A final decision in the Government's $3,075,104 tax suit against former Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon has been delayed six months by a sharp difference of opinion between Democratic and Republican members of the trial board of the U. S. Board of Tax Appeals, it was learned last night.

The judges are Bolon B. Turner, appointed three years ago by President Roosevelt, and Ernest Van Fossan, named to the board by President Calvin Coolidge and renominated by President Herbert Hoover.

The case involves Mellon's 1931 tax return. The Government has argued for three years that it should get an additional $3,075,104 slice of the vast Mellon fortune.

A three-man trial board was named to hear arguments. It was composed of Turner, Van Fossan and Charles M. Trammell, who since has resigned to become associated with legal interests representing the wealthy duPont family.

Opinions of Turner and Van Fossan are expected to be presented to the full board of 15 members, who will make the final decision some time in September.

Auxiliary to Hear Mrs. Lorena Hahn

Mrs. Lorena Hahn, of Wayne, Nebr., national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, will arrive in Washington this afternoon to attend the twelfth annual convention of the District of Columbia department. Through the national headquarters in Indianapolis, Mrs. Hahn directs the vast civic and patriotic program of the auxiliary's 450,000 members and the 8,500 units.

Mrs. Hahn will be the second national president to attend a local convention. She will speak at the opening session tonight in the D. C. Chapter House at the American Red Cross Building, 1710 E street northwest.

Mrs. Mary K. Killeen, department president, will preside over both sessions of the convention. Election of department officers, with installation following will feature the second session Tuesday night.

Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, a past national commander of the American Legion, has been invited to give the address of welcome.

Shell Found at Site Of Girl's Slaying

Pairis Du Chien, Wis., Aug. 15 (AP). Sheriff Oliver White of Crawford County said today he believed he had found the empty shell from which was fired the bullet that killed 11-year-old Mildred Best the night of June 4.

White said the shell was found near the spot designated by Harold Best, 15, brother of the girl, in one of the confessions White claims the boy had made. Harold is held without charge at the Crawford County Jail.

Gypsy Rose Lee Plans Second Wedding Ashore

Hollywood, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—Gypsy Rose Lee and Robert Mizzy, who decided on a marriage at sea to avoid a three-day wait on land, planned to be married all over again to make it legal. California does not recognize such sea-going marriages.

"But we'll be married Tuesday all over again—and on land this time," said Gypsy.

Poison Suspect Watches 'Mass Murder' Inquiry From Jail

Associated Press Photos.

Comely and blonde Mrs. Anna Filser Hahn, accused of the poison murders of George Gseltman, 67, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and a central figure in what Dudley Outcalt, prosecuting attorney, has termed "one of the biggest mass murders in the country," watches the news in her case and passes the time by reading books (left), in the Hamilton County Jail in Cincinnati, where she was arrested. In the center she tidies up a bit. At the right she talks the "whole thing" over with Chief Deputy George J. Heitzler as she sits down to her breakfast.

March of Jobless On D. C. Rumored; Police Investigate

With 32 cripples already "sitting down" in the front yard of WPA headquarters on New York avenue, police last night were investigating a report that 15 truckloads of unemployed were advancing on Washington via Hagerstown. They communicated with the surrounding communities but had no definite word of the supposed marchers' whereabouts.

A general march on the Capital was promised by David Lasser, head of the local WPA unemployed, two weeks ago. At that time he said "thousands will come here to protest against wholesale WPA dismissals."

Unemployed WPA workers intend to use the tents furnished for the Boy Scout encampment when their march on Washington gets under way, Lasser said.

The cripples are asking that unemployed handicapped persons be given WPA jobs and that a survey of the handicapped in America be undertaken at once.

Bystanders Catch Accused Slayer

Baltimore, Aug. 15 (AP).—A civilian posse early today ran down and captured an underwear-clad man police charged with shooting and killing his wife and fatally wounding Vincent Merendino, a barber, in his flight. Witnesses told police William King, colored, fired four pistol shots at his wife, Cora. Paul May, William Muller and Phillip Feldman, passing, said they gave chase.

Merendino, awakened by the shots, came to his front door. Mrs. Anna Hildebrand said King paused, leveled his pistol at Merendino and fired twice.

Labor Party Backs Dewey in N.Y. Race

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey, who anounced yesterday his willingness to become Republican candidate for district attorney of New York County, received tonight the formal backing of the American Labor Party.

Already the avowed supporter of Dewey's running mate, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, the party announced through its executive secretary, Alex Rose, that it had indorsed the youthful prosecutor, whose racket-smashing has made him a national figure.

Auto Union to Drop Many of Its Locals

Milwaukee, Aug. 15 (AP).—Ed Hall, second vice president of the United Auto Workers of America, said today the national convention, scheduled here August 23-28, would reorganize the auto workers union to exclude many locals now chartered as members.

"The 'odds and ends' unions taken under its wing by the Auto Workers International simply because they had no other place to go will be grouped in new internationals or separately chartered," said Hall.

Radio Stars Aid Drive To Unionize Artists

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—John L. Lewis and William Green have some new and potent rivals for public attention as labor leaders tonight in the persons of Jack Benny, Eddie Cantor, Bing Crosby, Grace Moore and Rudy Vallee.

Those names and others known to many were listed on the national board of directors of the newly formed American Federation of Radio Artists, which launched its drive today to organize the radio field.

England Dedicates U. S. War Cemetery

Brookwood, England, Aug. 15 (AP). The only American war cemetery and memorial chapel in England were dedicated today in the presence of Ambassador Robert W. Bingham and members of the British Cabinet.

Alfred Duff Cooper, first lord of the admiralty, made a gesture of friendship to Germany, pleading for a "new co-operation" among nations.

"The shroud of glory the war dead wove is broad enough to cover both victors and vanquished," he said.

Robert G. Woodside, vice president of the American Battle Monuments Commission, dedicating the last of the memorials erected by the commission in Europe, declared Americans want peace but "we are not pacifists—the slavery to which pacifist nations have been subjected in the past and to which they may be subject in the future, as exemplified by Communist regimentation, are far, far more terrible than the worst ever painted of war."

establish an air base at the North Pole were reported en route to Rudolph Island, 560 miles from the Polar cap, and three planes at Rudolph were ordered into the search. Two more planes were sent into the Arctic area as reserves.

On the basis of faint signals intercepted by the United States Army Signal Corps at Anchorage, Alaska, at 9:44 a. m., Eastern standard time, Saturday, hope was held for the safety of the Russian airmen, third group to brave the hazardous trans-Arctic route from Moscow to the United States this summer.

"No bearings . . . having trouble with . . . wave band," said the portion of the message received by the Signal Corps. Soviet officials concluded the big ship had landed safely on an ice floe.

The Soviet flight committee pointed out that polar ice regions provided comparatively favorable landing spots at this season and the six fliers had a supply of food sufficient for six weeks, as well as sleeping bags and a tent.

Burke Moves to Question Black on His Fitness for Service in Supreme Court

Foe Will Make Public Hearing Request Today

Borah May Drop Efforts to Hold Up Action in Committee.

In 1928. Another was the question whether a Senate committee in the past had declined to hear a reputable agency, such as the New York City Bar Association's judiciary committee, on such a matter.

Requested by Cook.

Alfred A. Cook, chairman of the association committee, Saturday requested such a hearing.

On the question of conduct of hearings Chairman Ashurst made it clear that "it is in the hands of Senator Neely (West Virginia Democrat), the chairman of the subcommittee," to call hearings if he desires.

Ashurst contended the sub-committee had had opportunity to inquire into the nomination in that way and had not availed itself of that chance.

"What is the need of hearings?" he asked. "We have all worked with Senator Black for ten years and certainly should know all about him by now."

No Instance Known.

Other Senators questioned yesterday said they did not recall any instance of such a refusal in connection with the nomination of circuit and district judges, but they recalled no precedent for the reference to committee of a nomination to the Supreme Court.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, who has served on the Judiciary Committee since 1917, said the last instances of conduct of hearings on a Supreme Court nominee was in the case of Associate Justice William D. Brandeis, nominated by President Wilson, and John J. Parker, nominated by President Hoover, and rejected. He, Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, and Borah pointed out that, ordinarily, nominations of Senators always are confirmed by the Senate without reference to committee.

All of them agreed, however, that refusal of hearings on any matter before a Senate committee is unusual.

May Not Attend.

Questioned as to whether he would vote to report the Black nomination favorably at the Judiciary Committee meeting today, Borah said:

"I doubt seriously if I will attend the meeting of the committee. I have not been feeling at all well. Most of today I was in bed. Unless I feel better, I do not expect to attend."

Asked if he felt the nomination should be delayed in committee for further discussion of its constitutional aspect, the Idahoan said:

"I do not think the committee chamber is the place for the discussion of constitutional questions. That is why, unless I feel better than I do now, I do not expect to attend the meeting tomorrow morning."

His reply was taken to indicate he will make whatever objection he has to the nomination on the floor of the Senate. He contends that no vacancy exists on the Supreme Court, because the Constitution makes no provision for the office of "retired judge" He contends Willis A. Van Devanter, under the Constitution, still is a member of the court.

King Disagrees.

King, an opponent of the Black nomination, said yesterday, however, he does not agree with Borah's contention.

Amplifying his announcement he will ask for public hearings on the nomination, Burke said:

"One of the things I think the committee should question Senator Black about is his attitude on the propriety of the Supreme Court passing on acts of Congress, the doctrine of judicial review."

Burke also said there had been reports Black had gone to the chairman of the Federal Communications Commission and requested him to assist a Senate lobby committee in having the Postal and Western Union telegraph companies open their files to the committee. Black was chairman of this committee. Burke would like to question Black on this.

Necessity Stressed.

The necessity for public hearings was emphatically cited by Bridges, who added that opponents of the nomination are considering filing with Chairman Henry F. Ashurst of the Judiciary Committee a letter requesting such hearings. The letter would be signed by all those fighting the nomination.

The New Hampshire Senator said there is ample precedent for such procedure, adding that Black himself was "one of the chief men who made an investigation" of another nominee for the Supreme Court bench, Judge John J. Parker, of Charlotte, nominated by President Hoover in 1930.

With Borah a probable absentee today, the Judiciary Committee stood, unofficially, ten for reporting the Black nomination, four against and two noncommittal. Burke, King, Senator Warren F. Austin, of Vermont, and Senator Frederick Steiwer, of Oregon, are those who will vote against a report, while Senators Tom Connally, of Texas, and Pat McCarran, of Nevada, have not disclosed what their action will be.

To Forge Ahead.

Congress appeared ready to forge steadily ahead toward adjournment, so far as other business is concerned. One major measure, the plugging of tax loopholes, has not passed either House.

King, who is ranking majority member of the Senate Finance Committee, said yesterday, however, he expects it to pass the House today and to be reported by the Finance Committee after brief hearings tomorrow. Other business on the calendar is:

House action on the Wagner-Steagall low cost housing bill.

Disposal of a third deficiency appropriation bill.

Adjustment of differences between Senate and House over sugar control legislation.

The Senate calendar should be comparatively clear by Thursday, leaders say, except for reports of conference committees and the noncontroversial deficiency bill.

All U.S. Women and Children Flee Shanghai; Marines Land; 3,000 Die in Japanese Attack

General Evacuation Ordered at Once, Warning Broadcast to Nationals in Central China; Bombs Damage American Ship; Battle Rages by Land, Sea and Air.

to the 3,000 estimated dead and 5,000 wounded in two days of fighting in this shattered metropolis.

The Shanghai attack followed an earlier raid by Japanese warplanes on Nanking, China's capital. Eight Japanese planes were reported shot down in flames after they had dropped nearly a score of bombs in the capital. Some sections of the ancient city were destroyed. Casualties were reported heavy. Newspaper correspondents were barred from the bomb-torn area.

Soon afterward regiments of the powerful Japanese home army arrived off Shanghai to aid hard-pressed naval forces seeking to drive more than 100,000 Chinese soldiers from the city.

The general attack was launched to cover the landing of the reinforcements.

Warships within the harbor rumbled with the roar of big guns. Japanese planes dived over the city battling a force of Chinese ships which were bombing Japanese lines to the north. The Japanese planes attacked Lunghwa and Hunjao airdromes in renewal of the aerial battle which on Saturday brought death to thousands, among them three American residents of the International Settlement.

The planes directed their offensive at Chinese positions near the Shanghai-Hangchow and the Shanghai-Nanking Railways. As the planes zoomed low for combat, great guns of Japanese warships began pounding at Chinese front lines.

Chinese shore batteries blazed in answer.

Chinese Caught by Surprise.

The Chinese about the airdromes apparently were caught completely by surprise. A lone anti-aircraft gun belatedly fired five shots as the Japanese planes zoomed out of range.

The Japanese had stolen a march on the enemy—opening their attack ahead of the Chinese offensive which generally had been expected to begin at early dawn.

Chinese planes attempted to retaliate by bombing reinforcements being landed at Japanese wharves, but they were forced to withdraw under fire from Japanese warplanes.

Explosions of air bombs were audible from the direction of the Yangtze estuary. It was believed the Chinese were bombing incoming Japanese troops above Woosung, ten miles up the Whangpoo at the point where that river joins the mighty Yangtze.

The fighting grew more intense as the morning wore on.

Face Food Shortage.

Foreigners faced a food shortage as Shanghai was becoming increasingly isolated. Americans appealed to Washington to instruct the United States Marines to open their commissary to the community if the need of food became acute.

Facilities were being provided to evacuate Americans and other foreigners who wished to leave.

O. G. Steen, Dollar Line's Orient manager, said the company was endeavoring to maintain communications in and out of Shanghai.

A tender this morning started for Woosung, taking outgoing Americans and others. Those departing boarded the steamer Taft. The McKinley and the President Jefferson are due at Woosung tomorrow to aid in the evacuation.

Queues of British women and children began pouring into the Shanghai Club at 9 a. m. to register for evacuation.

British women and children were being taken to Hongkong as fast as ships were available. There were indications British men, not needed for defense, might also depart, thus lessening responsibilities of British authorities and their defense forces. The British population here is 8,000.

There were reports the French were considering evacuating the concession.

Vice Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa, commanding Japanese forces, issued a proclamation warning all non-combatants, irrespective of nationality, to evacuate the vicinity around Chinese airdromes, whether civil or military. The Japanese commander threatened action would be taken against both military and civil craft suspected of military activity.

French to Shoot.

The warring fliers carefully avoided the French concession, where authorities announced they would tolerate no aircraft and let it be known they would open fire against planes of either force.

Two more British warships waited at Woosung to dash to Shanghai if their presence is needed. A second British battalion of troops, the Royal Ulster Rifles, left Hongkong for Shanghai aboard the Empress Asia. It was believed the Asia was to be used in evacuation of British nationals.

The destroyer Duncan landed 120 marines to join the present British force of 950, an American force of similar number, and a host of volunteers who kept guard along the international settlement frontiers.

Nanking Bombed.

Shanghai (Monday), Aug. 16 (U.P.). The undeclared Far Eastern war spread to Nanking today when eight Japanese planes flew over the capital in two groups and dropped 12 gaint bombs on the Chungshan road, Nanking's wide, new thoroughfare, and near the Ming Palace Airdrome. Parts of the city were wrecked. The airdrome was damaged.

Casualties were not revealed, but they were believed to have been heavy.

Fleets of fast Chinese fighting planes gave chase as the Japanese raiders sped back toward the aircraft carrier from which they had started.

Chinese asserted all of the Japanese planes were brought down. They fell in the eatern and southeastern suburbs, the Chinese said.

Reporter Barred.

A United Press correspondent was barred from the area, but talked to Chinese refugees who said they saw two planes fall in flames in the southeastern suburbs. One of them fell on fleeing Chinese, killing two women.

Other Japanese planes attempted to bomb the big Chinese air field at Hangchow. A Chinese village was bombed.

Meanwhile, huge Chinese and Japanese aerial bombs, long range artillery, naval rifles, antiaircraft guns, rifles and machine guns took an increasing toll of life in Shanghai's international settlement and the French concession today.

At 2 a. m. it was estimated conservatively that more than 2,000 persons, including military casualties, had been killed in the foreign areas.

Wounded were estimated at more than 5,000.

Japanese said units of the home army were attempting to land at Liuho, about 17 miles north of Shanghai's international bund, but were menaced by Chinese bombing planes which were hovering over the area.

One report was that a full Japanese army division was on transports off the city and that landing of troops on flat boats already had started.

Meantime Chinese officially announced that they had captured the Japanese Navy Club buildings on Chunking road, near Yangtsepoo, at 9:30 a. m. Sunday following a bitter battle in which more than 200 Japanese bluejackets were killed, while the Chinese lost only 20 dead.

A big shell from a long-range gun, believed to be a Chinese naval rifle mounted on a flat car north of the North Railway station, plowed through the roof and one wall of an apartment house in the French concession here and exploded in the compond of a Chinese home across the street.

A number of American tennants narrowly escaped injury.

Chinese planes twice attempted to bomb the Japanese cruiser Idzumo, flagship of the third battle fleet, artillery, naval rifles, antiaircraft in flames.

The first raid was at 1:10 p. m. when two Chinese planes of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's "suicide squadron" roared down over the big warship, anchored off the Japanese consulate general, just below the Cathay and Palace hotels, which were bombed Saturday by accident during a similar fight.

Planes Driven Off.

The cruiser's anti-aircraft batteries drove them off and they vanished in the clouds over Chapei in the native area.

The second raid was at 3:25 p. m. by a single Chinese plane which again was driven off.

Anti-aircraft batteries of the British cruiser Falmouth, anchored near the Idzumo, were cleared for action during both raids. Chinese had warned the British to move their ships because of danger they might be bombed by accident.

After leaving the Idzumo the Chinese plane bombed the Japanese naval headquarters, a few blocks north, where it was struck by a Japanese shell. It crashed in flames on the roof of a building in Chapei, inside the Chinese lines.

In Tokyo the cabinet was in almost continuous emergency session and the Premier, Prince Fumimaro Konoye, was in constant contact with the Emperor.

Chinese and Japanese armies still were locked in indecisive combat on the Peiping-Suiyuan railway northwest of Peiping, on the Peiping-Hankow railway just south of the ancient northern capital, and on the Tientsin-Pukow-Nanking railway just south of Tientsin.

Evacuation General.

The bloodiness of the struggle in Shanghai was causing a general evacuation of all Americans and Europeans.

Police announced at 4 a. m. that 1,047 bodies had been taken from the ruins of the great world amusement resort and adjacent areas at avenue Edward VII and Tibet road which was smashed Saturday by aerial bombs. Police listed 1,003 persons as injured in this single incident, in which at least two Americans, Dr. Frank J. Rawlinson and H. S. Honigsberg, were killed.

The body of Dr. R. K. Reichhauer, Princeton University professor, who was killed in the air bombing of the Palace Hotel, was to be shipped to the United States for burial.

Reports Seven Shot Down.

By the United Press

The Chinese Embassy last night released a message from Nanking reporting that seven Japanese bombers had been shot down yesterday during two air raids on Hangchow.

The communication said:

"Twenty heavy Japanese bombers from Formosa attempted the second raid on Hangchow at 9 o'clock this morning (August 15). Four were shot down. The aerial battle is still in progress. Eleven bimotored Japanese bombers participated in the first raid yesterday (August 14.) Three were shot down in the vicinity of Hangchow and the rest were badly damaged. Some were forced to land in various places in Chekiang Province, and only three returned.

"Severe fighting continued in Shanghai throughout the night with the Japanese warships shelling Chapei, and the Chinese made determined attacks on the Yangtsepoo district where additional Japanese reinforcements sought to effect landing. Another division of the Japanese regulars is expected to arrive at Shanghai today.

"The Japanese attacks on Nankow during the last three days have so far proved to be abortive. It is officially reported that the Chinese casualties are at about 500 and the Japanese casualties almost double.

"Extreme tension is prevailing in Tsingtao as a result of yesterday's incident, wherein one Japanese was injured. According to Chinese eyewitnesses, there was a fracas between two Japanese seamen and one Japanese civilian in European clothes, but the Japanese consul insisted that the victim was shot by the Chinese. It is feared that the Japanese are going to use the incident as a pretext to start hostilities in the province of Shantung."

Shanghai Bombings Blamed On Overenthusiastic Pilots

John H. Jouett, of Hagerstown, Founder of China's Air Corps, Says Fliers Couldn't Aim Carefully Enough.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 15.—John H. Jouett, American aviation expert who laid the foundation for the Chinese air force now waging bitter warfare with Japanese foes, said today the bombing of Shanghai was "probably the result of overenthusiasm and over confidence."

Bombs rained from Chinese planes, manned, doubtless, by fliers trained at the Hankow Air School Jouett established five years ago, blasted congested Shanghai areas Saturday. They killed three Americans and hundreds of others, many Europeans among them.

Jouett, now president of the Fairchild Aviation Corporation here, said the Chinese pilots, "anxious to get in there and do things for their country," doubtless aimed their deadly projectiles at Japanese warships lying in the river nearby.

"What occurred," he said, "was most unfortunate. These confident and enthusiastic young fliers were trying high altitude bombing—a hard undertaking for anyone not constantly drilled in just that sort of thing."

Perfect Timing Needed.

"At modern airplane speed, a mistake of one second makes a difference of more than 100 yards in where a bomb strikes. The ships in the harbor were too close to the congested areas.

"Just a little error—one ever so slight—and then havoc and horror such as was wrought Saturday."

Jouett, who resigned from the American Air Corps and went to China in 1932 to organize the Chinese force, praised the young Chinese as "just about as good as American fliers, if not superior in some respects."

"The Chinese pilots, American-trained," he commented, "are about two-to-one better than the Japanese. They are quick on the trigger, where the Japanese are slow and methodical.

"But they will have to conserve their strength for bombing operations and not risk their planes otherwise."

Trained 350 Fliers.

Before Jouett returned to the United States two years ago he had supervised the training, he estimated, of about 350 Chinese fliers.

Jouett was accompanied in China by ten young fliers, five first-class mechanics and 15 primary training planes. Some of those associated with Jouett are still in China and the number of Chinese pilots has grown steadily. Experts estimate China now has about 800 American-trained pilots and 400 of the latest type airplanes, of which about 80 per cent are of American manufacture.

and later to an apartment hotel in the French Concession."

George Battary, an Atlanta, Ga., newspaperman, who has been working with Chinese newspapers since 1931 and living with Chinese families to learn their customs, described the "most thrilling experience of my life."

"World War Nothing."

"World War incidents were nothing compared to my experiences on a 4-mile bicycle ride from my home in the Kiangwan sector—where I was isolated between Chinese and Japanese firing—to the International Settlement amid bursting shrapnel and booming guns.

"For the past few weeks tension was gradually increasing in the Kiangwan area with intermittent pistol shots audible since and the arrival of Japanese troops. The real trouble started when Chinese and Japanese clashed near where I was living with a Chinese family.

"Peace preservation corps members (Chinese gendarmes) were entrenched in nearby potato and cotton fields with machine guns, sandbags, rifle pits and road barricades. On the following day both the Chinese and Japanese brought big guns into play and antiaircraft guns were frequently fired.

"I flew the United States flag over my quarters in the two-story plaster house. For safety I moved my bedding to the ground floor and slept nightly in a 5-foot iron bathtub, although I am 6 feet 2 inches tall."

"Pieces of shrapnel burst into the room, passing through both walls, but, amazingly, no bullets hit my quarters. I believe both Chinese and Japanese were respecting the United States flag which was affording me protection.

"Early Sunday, when bombs exploded overhead, breaking the windows, I decided to leave. I attached the flag to my bicycle and I started for the settlement.

"I pedaled through a rain of bullets and though I met no Chinese, numerous Japanese patrols shouted 'banzai' (hooray) and smiled.

Battery shocked British residents of China in 1936 by producing a book entitled "Edward the Abdicator, or Wallis in Wonderland."

Diet Figures in Killing.

New York, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—Mrs. Sarah Cortese, 28, was a vegetarian. Her husband, Joseph, 38, believed meat was an essential part of the diet. There were many arguments. Tonight police announced Cortese confessed beating his wife to death because she refused to serve anything but vegetables.

Paris' New Budget Balances on Paper

Paris, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—Finance Minister Georges Bonnet and a staff of experts tonight virtually completed France's 1938 budget, which will balance on paper. He will place it before Parliament between September 15 and 20.

Bonnet also whipped into shape the final series of economic and financial reform measures which will be decreed under the plenary power act, when it expires August 31.

Reich Flying Boat In Flight to U. S.

Horta, Azores, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—The German flying boat Nordmeer, surveying a transatlantic route to the United States, was catapulted off the deck of the mother ship Schwabenland today for a 2,400-mile overwater jump to New York.

Fort Dearborn Heroes Honored at Services

Chicago, Aug. 15 (A.P.).—Memorial services were conducted today in honor of the heroes of Fort Dearborn, massacred by Indians 125 years ago.

Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, U. S. A. retired, said in an address that "the West was not won by the Government but by the impulse of those brave people, the pioneers and the soldiers. It is well for us to honor the valor of the 6,000 men and women who were killed in the western movement that gave us our great country."

Hearings On Senator Black.

Reasonable appeals for a hearing on Senator Black's nomination as a Supreme Court justice have come from a number of sources. The case against rushing a confirmation vote has been made especially appealing by Alfred A. Cook, chairman of the judiciary committee of the Bar Association of New York City. Without specifically opposing the nomination, he pleads for an opportunity for lawyers of the country to express their views before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

It will be difficult for the committee to reject such an appeal; for in general principles it coincides with the attitude of the Administration toward the Supreme Court. President Roosevelt has complained repeatedly that the present membership of the court is not representative of public opinion. Indeed, that was the basis on which he sought enlargement of the court's membership. Certainly, then, the President should be willing to let the public express its views as to the qualifications of his first nominee to the court.

The demand for hearings becomes the stronger because of the legal tangle in which the court vacancy has become involved. Some Senators are taking the view that, since the retired Justice Van Devanter is still technically a member of the court, the vacancy to be filled is a new post. If so, it would be impossible under the Constitution to appoint a member of the present Congress to that position.

The most certain way to clear up this and other legal complications, and to ascertain whether Senator Black has the qualifications which the people expect to find in a jurist named to our highest tribunal, is to conduct a public hearing. Nearly every member of the court has been subjected to such scrutiny before obtaining the approval of the Senate. The fact that the present nominee is a member of the Senate accentuates instead of minimizing the desirability of obtaining outside judgment. Senators who are timorous about weighing the judicial qualifications of a colleague should welcome an expression of public opinion.

When the committee meets this morning, therefore, it can not vote to deny an expression of public opinion on this issue without taking upon itself a heavy responsibility. Certainly if the President's wish to see the court more representative of current trends of thought is to be respected, lawyers and laymen alike will be permitted to have their say.

A Reminder To Congress.

President Roosevelt's veto of the joint resolution providing for a comprehensive plan of flood control was thoroughly justified.

He pointed out that under this proposal Army engineers would be the sole national planning agencies, not only for flood control but for all other projects concerned with the utilization and conservation of the country's water resources. Local and State agencies, furthermore, would be ignored and no provision would be made for a comprehensive review of the whole program "from the standpoints of national budgetary considerations and national conservation policies."

Federal, State and local agencies, in conjunction with the National Resources Committee, have long been working on plans for developing a national water program on a comprehensive scale. While immediately necessary flood-control work is being pushed, it is most important to have in mind the major objectives of a unified, long-time policy.

As a special committee of the National Resources Committee has stated, such a plan is "not a collection of unrelated policies applicable respectively to individual types of problems associated with the use and control of water." On the contrary, account must be taken of innumerable collateral and related objectives, such as navigation, irrigation, power development, flood prevention, drainage and control of soil erosion.

Obviously, Army engineers, however competent, cannot be expected to envisage and allow for the many-sided aspects of such a program as the President intends to present to Congress next January. It seems strange that Congress has to be reminded of the deficiencies of its own proposal after the extensive publicity that has been given to the work of the National Resources Committee and co-operating planning agencies.

The legislative attitude may be due in part to realization that a really comprehensive program of water control calls for the co-operation of a discouragingly large number of heterogeneous local, State and national agencies. However, that is not an adequate excuse for preferring an ultra-simplified program that would inevitably be unbalanced and therefore incapable of yielding maximum benefits to the Nation as a whole.

The Confused Housing Bill.

The disadvantages of hasty legislation are being impressively demonstrated by the tortuous course of the housing bill. Within a short period that measure has been virtually rewritten three different times. If it is rushed to enactment during the coming week, even its authors are likely to be perplexed as to its meaning.

Senator Wagner's original bill was extensively modified before it reached the floor of the Senate. While under debate in that legislative chamber it was virtually rewritten again. Last week the House Banking and Currency Committee completed further extensive revision of the bill. As it goes to the floor of the House the public is thoroughly confused as to its provisions, and the same is probably true of most Congressmen.

In many respects the Senate improved the bill. The House has still further strengthened some provisions, while injecting several amendments of a questionable nature. Apparently there is no general agreement as to how the proposed Federal housing authority should operate. That is entirely natural, for the United States has never had a real housing policy. But this wide divergence of opinion sharply emphasizes the desirability of moving slowly in a field where there are few guide posts and many chances of blundering.

One House committee amendment, for example, would require local communities to provide 25 per cent of the annual rental subsidies intended to make slum replacement projects available to low-income families. In principle it is unquestionably good policy to require participation of local communities in the financing of such projects as well as in their management. But this requirement, together with 15 per cent contributions to building costs, may be too high.

Only a few local housing agencies in this country are functioning at present. The States need considerable encouragement to develop slum reclamation projects, even when Federal assistance is granted. Care should be taken to avoid making essential contributions so high as to frustrate the purposes of the measure. Before amendments of this character are accepted Congress ought to have some idea as to what their effect would be.

In place of the Senate's three-man housing authority the House committee would have a single administrator and a board of nine members without salaries to serve in an advisory capacity. That system of administration is in line with the policy advocated by the Brownlow committee. Certainly it would permit more efficient operation of the law. And the advisory board would doubtless serve as a check against arbitrary action on the part of the administrator.

Offsetting this constructive move, however, the committee eliminated a provision applying civil service regulations to officers and experts of the proposed housing agency. Control by a single administrator is tolerable only when the merit system is invoked. The insatiable appetite of Congressmen for spoils has cast a shadow over the entire undertaking.

Congress should certainly take time to iron out these inconsistencies and to make certain that the housing policy finally adopted will be practicable. Another fiasco in this field would be worse than no action at all. For it would probably delay any comprehensive movement against the slums to the indefinite future.

Action On The Armory.

The District was scarcely prepared for the President's request that Congress appropriate $210,000 to purchase an armory site here. The question of a new headquarters for the District National Guard has been in the air for a long time—since 1908, indeed, when the first armory commission was named. That action is finally being taken would be gratifying news if there were any assurance that the cost of the project would be equitably distributed.

Recently the Commissioners decided that purchase of the proposed armory site could be postponed no longer without heavy cost to the District. The Budget Bureau was so informed. This agency, approving the Commissioners' recommendation, passed it on to the President for signature and forwarding to Congress. Thus the District may soon take title to virtually the last available site for an armory within the city limits. The abruptness of this action is amply justified by the fact that the land in question is rapidly being bought up for private development.

It is probably fair enough that the District should purchase the site for a new armory. The hint, however, that Washington taxpayers will also be expected ultimately to finance construction of an armory should be thoroughly repudiated. For the National Guard in the District is primarily a Federal institution. Unlike the States where the Governors have command, the District has no authority over the local reserves. They take orders from the President; they are principally supported by Federal funds. It follows, then, that their armory should be largely a Federal responsibility.

Some States have received Federal aid in erecting their National Guard armories; Baltimore's big Fifth Regiment building, for example, was a PWA project. The District, particularly because it has no control over its National Guard, can properly demand even greater Federal assistance in an undertaking of this sort.

Suspending The Contest.

House action on the wages-and-hours bill appears to have been effectually blocked by the determined opposition of a handful of Congressmen on the Rules Committee. This, of course, does not mean that Federal regulation of wages and hours ceases to be a live issue. The struggle will be merely suspended, not abandoned, if Congress adjourns without taking action.

At the next session President Roosevelt will no doubt renew pressure for passage of a proposal that stands high on his list of desired measures. And he will be actively supported by advocates of such legislation within and without Congress. Indeed, Representative Healey, who heads a wages-and-hours steering committee in the House, hopes that it will be possible to put through a stronger measure at the coming session.

It would be a great mistake either to underrate the significance of sectional antagonism to the wages-and-hours bill or to assume that it is the only important reason for opposition. Fear that the relatively low wage standards prevailing in the South might be raised unduly by a Federal regulatory agency is not due to a wholly selfish desire to gain a competitive advantage at the expense of labor. Every part of the country has good reason to share the South's fear of Federal intervention in local industrial affairs.

Decrees raising existing wage rates in one section, for instance, may cause industries to shift to other regions, with loss of employment and serious industrial dislocations. Such dangers would be minimized if the Federal regulatory agency could always be depended upon to act with discretion and wisdom. But in the nature of the case there can be no such assurance.

Although the authority that would be conferred upon the proposed Fair Labor Standards Board under both the House and Senate bills is extremely far-reaching, there are numerous occupational groups engaged in strictly intrastate activities that are constitutionally exempt from Federal regulation. These constitutional limitations upon a program for Federal regulation of wages and hours have received comparatively little attention.

The possibilities of a more restricted kind of Federal legislation designed to strengthen and supplement rather than displace State protective laws have also been inadequately explored. Furthermore, the problem of child labor remains unsolved. It is dealt with in quite different ways under the House and Senate bills, but neither method provides protection against the exploitation of children in local industries. That can be done only through passage of a constitutional amendment.

For many reasons, therefore, everybody ought to be grateful to the recalcitrant Congressmen who have held up these undigested legislative proposals on wages and hours. Delay will afford both advocates and opponents an opportunity to clarify their views, air their differences, and find out the real sentiment of the country on a highly controversial issue.

It Can Be Done.

Ratification by union heads of the wage agreements recently reached between representatives of Class I railroads and 14 non-operating brotherhoods is announced. This concluding action gives effect to the settlement of a controversy that at one time threatened to precipitate a strike of between 750,000 and 800,000 workers.

Originally the differences between the wage increases demanded by the unions, and the amounts the roads might reasonably have been expected to concede, were extreme. In the end the carriers agreed to add nearly $100,000,000 to their annual pay rolls, while the unions accepted advances amounting to but one-fourth of their annual initial demands. Thus it will be seen that the gap bridged by negotiation through the intervention of the National Mediation Board was really formidable.

Disputes between railway managements and their employes are numerous and often serious. For that reason the record for peaceful adjustment of such controversies since the railway labor act was passed, over a decade ago, is both remarkable and significant. It points unmistakably to the value of efficient Federal machinery for arbitrating disputes. And it also shows the importance of developing strong and disciplined labor unions experienced in the ways of collective bargaining and ready to accept responsibility for the acts of their members.

Given the same aids to peaceful adjustment of disputes, there seems no good reason why the almost strikeless record of the railways should not be duplicated in our mass-production industries.

Father Divine recently closed a letter with, "This leaves me well, healthy, joyful, peaceful, lively, living, successful, prosperous and happy in spirit, body and mind and in every organ, muscle, sinew, joint, limb, vein and bone, and even in every atom, fiber and cell of my bodily form." He must have been feeling pretty good.

Reaction To The Nomination

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Perhaps by the time this letter appears in The Post, Senator Hugo L. Black will have been confirmed as a member of the Supreme Court. But whether so or not, The Post editorial of August 13 headed "The Black Nomination" raises arguments that should not be ignored. They should be answered. They are adroitly stated by an able editorial writer, but the reasoning is, to my judgment, none the less fallacious.

The editorial objects to Senator Black on the high court because of his alleged "extreme partisanship." A study of the Alabama Senator's record fails to reveal that his partisanship has been any more "extreme" than that of some of the present members of the supreme tribunal. They, too, were "partisans" before elevation to the bench, and actively espoused the causes in which they believed. A number of them were conspicuously partisan in championing the claims of vast corporations in various courts and in the political arena. Few of them were partisan in behalf of organized labor, the agricultural interests and the small-business men. However, nearly all, if not all, of the men now serving as Supreme Court justices were just as partisan in one way or another as Senator Black has been. Why not? What of it?

Must a man be an intellectual eunuch, incapable of vigorous opinions or too dumb to express them, in order to qualify for a seat among the nine beyond whom there is now no appeal except to high heaven? Isn't it more in harmony with the militant democratic ideals of Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln and Bryan that a Supreme Court judge be a man keenly concerned about human welfare, a man who has energetically battled for social progress, a man who, instead of isolating himself in a sterilized political ether of cowardly inactivity, has been in the thick of the fight for economic justice?

"Extreme partisanship!" Why, Senator Black's partisanship has merely been the manly advocacy by a fearless public official of the progressive principles he believed essential to a better America.

The Post goes on to say that "professionally he (Senator Black) has no such eligibility (to the Supreme Court)." But The Post overlooks that there are no professional requirements. If I mistake not, a Supreme Court justice need not even be a lawyer. He could be an economist, a teacher, a mechanic, a farmer, a miner. Appointment of lawyers is a custom, not compulsory. And when lawyers are named—as has been the practice so far—the number of years they have followed their profession, and the judicial positions they have previously filled, do not necessarily determine whether they are fit for the jobs.

The common people of the United States, the average man on Main—not Wall—street, would, I suspect, rather trust ultimate judicial decisions to attorneys with less experience in the artificial atmosphere of legalistic hair-splitting, where calloused indifference to heart throbs and profound reverence for the sanctity of wealth are forever the correct fashion. A barrister with an honest passion—yes, an "extreme partisanship"—for fair play for the ordinary citizen, will appeal more favorably to most of us as a desirable Supreme Court justice than the most "experienced" and persuasive apologists for entrenched greed in the land.

LINN A. E. GALE.
Washington, Aug. 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The nomination of Senator Black to the Supreme Court of the United States may be compared to the insulin "shock" treatment now being administered to schizophrenetics in St. Elizabeths. If it results in no reaction of healthy shame, we as a Nation are beyond hope.

What have we done to merit this?

Our most hallowed spot, our "holy of holies," is the Supreme Court of the United States. There sat John Jay, John Marshall and Joseph Story—great patriots and great jurists all. A former President of the United States, one of the greatest of our Secretaries of State, felt honored by appointment to the Court which still stands as the guardian angel of democracy.

Hugo Black has been an active participant in the most shameful episode of our political history. He has aided and abetted the present Administration in its attempt to debauch the United States Senate. There may be a moral distinction to be drawn between a racketeer who, failing the payment of tribute, threatens to hurl a bomb into a dry-cleaning establishment and an official who threatens a Senator with political ruin unless he votes in disregard of his conscience and his oath of office. But, such a distinction may be made only by a very subtle casuist.

The qualification—it is said to be his sole qualification—possessed by Senator Black for the high office into which he is to be thrust is that he has rendered unquestioning aid to President Roosevelt. Is there no higher test than that for the great office of Supreme Court Justice?

What claim did Louis D. Brandeis have upon the gratitude of Woodrow Wilson? None, whatever. He was merely an outstanding humanist, one of the three greatest lawyers in the United States and a man willing to sacrifice half a million dollars a year to serve his country.

What had Benjamin Cardozo done to win his nomination to the Court from the much-condemned Herbert Hoover, with whom Franklin Roosevelt invites comparison? Nothing. Cardozo had done no work for the President. He had not aided in his nomination, nor in his election. He was merely the foremost judge in the highest court in the greatest State of our Union. His high moral qualities, his great legal ability was known from coast to coast. Hoover sought nothing else but to obtain those great services for his country. He had no lien upon the future decisions of his appointee.

It is possible that Black may prove to be to Roosevelt as John Marshall was to Jefferson, who vainly sought to influence his Chief Justice in the Burr treason trial. But how slender is that hope, when we compare the back records of the two men.

HOWARD PITCHER OKIE.
Washington, Aug. 13.

The the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to commend you on the timely editorial on the Black nomination. I do not see how any Senator who reads it can vote for confirmation after having done so.

The nomination of Senator Black clearly indicates the low esteem in which the President holds the Court and it undoubtedly marks his crowning effort to discredit that body.

A MEMBER OF CONGRESS.
Washington, Aug. 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Years ago the late John R. McLean volunteered to aid a then struggling young local doctor get a position with the District government as physician to the poor. The young medico thanked the publisher saying that diseases of the poor were really outside his special field—since he had determined "to specialize in diseases of the rich." Which recalls the advice to a young colleague of one of our city's most successful lawyers that "the best client is a very rich man thoroughly scared."

Your editorial on the Supreme Court appointment this morning leads one to wonder. Do we not all instinctively grant the position of eminence in the law to those practitioners who specialize in the legal diseases of the rich? The interminable squabbles between the grabbers and the grabbees of property, particularly the lucrative defense of the big grabbers, furnish the surest paths to legal prominence.

You publish Woodrow Wilson's ringing defense of Mr. Justice Brandeis. Go back to the files of The Post in the spring and early summer of 1916 and let us read again what called this forth—the statements of Elihu Root, former President Taft, President Lowell of Harvard, Joseph Choate, branding the new appointee "unfit" and "lacking in judicial temperament." Also recall that the American Bar Association conceived it to be its "painful duty" to oppose the Brandeis confirmation.

When ills involving the conflicting rights of intricate corporate ownership are to the fore I imagine Mr. Justice Black will listen respectfully to, say, Mr. Justice Sutherland. He may listen to many other of his colleagues upon many other questions. For a lifetime Mr. Black has been specializing in political diseases of the poor. For 11 years he has been studying intensively the causes and compounding remedies for the most malignant and devastating economic disease of all—unemployment. There will be times enough when his eight colleagues will turn a respectful ear to him.

"For the rational study of the law" once declared the late great Justice Holmes, "the man of the future is the master of statistics and the master of economics."

DWIGHT T. SCOTT.
Washington, Aug. 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I quite agree with your editorial on "The Black Nomination." My observation of Senator Black in Congress—the kind of legislation he sponsors, his tactics and conduct as chairman of the Black Investigating Committee an his vitriolic radio talk on the "Town Hall of the Air" program—stand as indexes to the character of his personality. His intemperate speech and manner before the microphone convinces me he is not a type of man broad enough in thought and sympathy to serve all the people.

Senator Black has impressed me as a man narrowly partisan, bitterly anti-business, fanatically pro-labor, and so biased that he can be recklessly blind to consequences for all other than his parucularly favored group. I maintain that this type of mind does not see all classes justly and is therefore unsuitable to any court, much less the people's court of last resort—our Supreme Court.

HELEN B. GOCH.
Washington, Aug. 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The greatest rubber stamp of the Senate becomes the Supreme Court stooge for this "wonderful President!"

JOHN B. MANNING.
Washington, Aug. 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Senator Black may not please all, but judging from his past record, laws passed by Congress beneficial to humanity will not be declared unconstitutional by his vote.

No doubt there will be other resignations in the near future, as now the majority of members will be sympathetic to modern civilization.

Tramp Tripping

AT ONE time only friends of the owners were permitted to travel on freighters, but now virtually every cargo carrier is prepared, and most of them have deck plans and regular price lists.

You may think of freighters as dingy, dirty and ancient, but nowadays cargo moves in fast, clean vessels that go everywhere.

A study of the fares will show freighter journeying to be as cheap as it is varied. Two dollars a day takes you from New York to the Pacific Coast and return. Three dollars or less pays your daily cost on a tour of the Orient. For $4 you get your cabin and meals for a tour of the world. You can go almost anywhere in a freighter for $5 a day.

"But the people you meet!" the uninitiated will exclaim when you start talking about vagabond voyaging.

Yet that, you'll discover, is one of the nicest things about freighter travel. Freighters, by their very limitations, serve to protect the carefree adventurer from most of the pests of ocean travel. There's rarely a doctor aboard, so invalids, infants and the talkative aged stay at home. The absence of a practicing M. D. shouldn't worry normal folks though. The captain has his medicine chest; he and the mate are both surgeons of a sort, and the wireless is always available for emergency advice.

People who travel on freighters are those who have leisure. Tramp tripping is not for the office worker with the last two weeks in August to spend resting up. You'll find writers, artists and college professors. You may not meet Noel Coward, who wrote "Design for Living," aboard a cargo boat, but other famous authors are returning to their favorites for a second or third or tenth cruise.

Mr. Pepy's Omission.

The old controversy over the pronunciation of the name of Pepys has been revived once more in the correspondence columns of the London Observer. Ought it to be Peeps, or Peppis, or Peps? One correspondent has even discovered a contemporary verse in which it is made to rhyme with "lips," but this may, of course, have been only poetic license.

No one can answer the question definitely now, at least no one can adduce proof positive. Indeed, it must have been a problem to Pepys' contemporaries; for they spelt his name in no less than 17 different ways, and since the spelling of proper names was apt to be somewhat phonetic in those days, this seems to indicate some difference of opinion as to its pronunciation.

It is odd that he, who told us in such a wealth of detail about himself, should have left this point to be disputed; and it is pleasant to deduce that he was above any petty annoyance in the matter. Nevertheless, quite unwittingly, "he left the name at which the world grew pale," or, at any rate, "sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought." It is a lesson to the Great Man, who bequeaths his name to posterity, to add, if he be a Cholmondeley, a Beauchamp, or such-like, a clause to his legacy enabling it to be disposed of correctly.

Queen's Necklace.

Could Napoleon be brought back to life and endowed with a sense of humor, he might find sardonic amusement in the sale of Marie Antoinette's diamond necklace to the Maharajah of Darbhanga. For it was in India that Napoleon planned to strike his hardest blow at England, and all his plans were made to this effect until the Russian campaign proved disastrous. The diamonds symbolized and in a sense caused the French revolution, which made possible the rise of Bonaparte, who in turn imposed a dictatorship more thorough than even that of the Bourbons.

Recently, France celebrated the Fourteenth of July, and in the observance joined New Orleans, one-time capital of a proposed French empire in the New World, which Napoleon sold (say some historians) because of British mastery of the seas. The lovely and unfortunate Marie Antoinette lived and died like a queen, but the genealogical tree of her jewels is cluttered with moss and fungus. We gather that the outmoded princesses who last owned the diamonds were in need of money, and therefore put them up at public auction in London. So the fabulously rich Sir Kameshwar Singh purchased them and, since he is a famous gem fancier, presumably will restore them to royal company

America is noted among its neighbors in the rest of the world for having everything and doing everything on the largest scale. That reputation is now being preserved through the taking of the largest photograph in the world—an aerial picture of the United States. As a matter of fact, the photograph is to be a composite of some two and a half million snapshots which are now about one-third finished, for the work of taking this enormous photograph was begun in 1934. It will be several years before it is finished and then it will have cost about $30,000,000, so that it will not only be the biggest but the most expensive photograph ever taken.

It is conceivable that aerial photographs of certain sections of the country would be useful in flood control and forest fire prevention studies, but a detailed picture of more than 3,000,000 square miles of territory at a cost of $30,000,000 would seem to be overdoing the matter, even for America.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Mr. Roosevelt.

THAT MR. ROOSEVELT has his faults your correspondent would be among the first to admit under very little pressure, but as a social and political livershaker he has had no equal in our time in this country. Ornery, tricky, stubborn, wayward and strong as a bull, he has bucked, wheeled, kicked, walked on his hind legs, tried to mash us against the barn and scrape our heads off under the door in more than four years of continuous plunging, and he apparently isn't even breathing hard yet.

Pull him out of one willful, pesky trick and he will stand there a minute with his head down, showing the whites of his eyes and then go tearing off across the yard helibent, rattling our teeth and every bone and joint in our body.

Possibly if we had known what a wild, stubborn critter he was we might have been less willing to take a chance on him in the first place. He looked nice and dressy back there in 1932, and although he did give some indications of unconventional habits, there was nothing in his past record to indicate what a cantankerous hide he would turn out to be.

• • • •

THAT BUSINESS about the Forgotten Man and the New Deal was interesting and gave promise of a few surprises, but all candidates, except your consummate Landons and John Davises, have their little catchphrases, and we had developed a habit of forgetting all such after inauguration. In Mr. Roosevelt's previous political career he never really had a contest in which to show what a hard mouth and iron obstinacy he possessed. On his record it seemed likely that after a little spell of kicking and biting just to signalize his arrival in the White House he would cool out, be nice and back into the shafts like any Coolidge or Hoover.

Instead, however, he went into his dance in March, 1933, and before anyone knew what had happened he was lashing out with his heels and shaking us all over the place. NRA, TVA, AAA, CCC he sprang on us before we could catch a fair hold, and while the world was still spinning he started lending people Federal money to mend a leaky sink or buy a new mule and building tailor-made towns in Eastport and Knoxville and digging a ditch across Florida and building a dam to harness the tides of Fundy. The ditch and dam seemed not so good once they were well under way; so, all right, skip them, and what about a new kind of Supreme Court?

• • • •

HE TELLS US that one-third of the population is ill-housed, ill-fed and ill-clothed, which may be true or an exaggeration. He wants to dictate wages and hours and wipe out the rights of the States, which are largely fictitious or abandoned; he wants to put a roof over every family and a little money in the bank for everyone, and he has jogged the South into a realization at last that the Negro is the white man's enemy only because the white employer uses the Negro to depress the pay and the living conditions of the sallow brother in the faded overalls. That last one, accomplished without a massacre, is one of the great victories of the age.

Vindictive, a practical ward politician as well as a big-timer, a sulker and a plotter, he is also showing himself to be a tremendously tough, rough-and-tumble fighter, who will use any hitch that comes to mind, and expects to be used the same way. Anyone who gentles Mr. Roosevelt is simply imposing a handicap on himself, for he won't gentle you back—a fact which it took most of us some time to learn at the expense of a very severe jouncing.

Well, he is still wild in many of his methods, and he is not to be trusted with a loose rein for an instant, but in spite of all this he has accomplished some reforms, and, much more important, he has stirred the whole Nation for once into an appreciation of the real problems of poverty, unequal distribution, unequal opportunity, dictatorship and the rights and obligations of the States.

Never in our time have people been so conscious of the burden they carry in taxes, of the meanness which a complacent upper class will practice on the help, and of the Government's duty to do something real and personal for the assistance of those who are so far down that they can't help themselves.

He needs to be fought all the time, for he has an enormous appreciation of himself and of any idea which he happens to approve, but if the country doesn't go absolutely broke in his time it will be a more intelligent and a better country after him.

China's Despair

Shanghai Observer Sees Republic's Hopes To Repel Japan Frustrated By Corruption, Inefficiency And Lack Of National Unity.

SHANGHAI.

TO FOREIGN FRIENDS of China, the current debacle in the north has been a cruel and a disillusioning blow. Watching for the past five years the growth of China's national consciousness and the strengthening of her war machine, foreign observers came to believe that China had come of age. This faith has now been seriously undermined by the corruption, inefficiency and lack of national unity bared by the latest Sino-Japanese incident.

In four brief weeks in the north the Japanese military machine has massacred a full-sized Chinese army, occupied China's ancient capital and its second busiest port, expelled the more or less regularly instituted administration and defied the Nanking government to interfere with agreements reached between the Japanese army and the local corrupt officials.

In any other country, proud of its name and history, such actions would have aroused a fury of indignation, a popular movement to take up arms in defense of the country, a positive stand by the government.

These reactions will be searched for in vain in China. The country apathetically watches the severance of two more provinces by its energetic neighbor, while warlords, national and provincial, are busily engaged in jockeying for positions of vantage and profit.

Students Kept Silent By Japan's Ruthlessness.

THE STUDENTS, who for decades have been in the first lines of the patriotic movement, are remaining silent. A Chinese professor in a big local university ascribes this unusual reticence to fear of general mobilization in case of war.

Enough has leaked into the columns of the rigidly censored press to indicate the terrifying efficiency of the Japanese war machine. This sufficed to make the students, who last year clamored for resistance to Japan, reluctant to serve their country.

The only vigorous expressions of opposition to Japan's actions in North China today emanate from the Communists in the northwest, the government-controlled press, and the warlords in South China, where they feel themselves safe from Japanese retaliation.

When one speaks today of Chinese "public opinion," which can force the hand of the government, he thinks of the Communists, the southern warlords, the elements opposed to the Nanking government, the leftist National Salvation Associations and a small army clique, which still retains a belief in China's ability to wage a major war.

This last group is small and probably has no big, active following. Its strength lies in its ability to make its voice heard and in its position as potential trouble-maker if its demands are ignored. The rest of China's 400,000,000 still worry about their crops, taxes, bandits and warlords and apathetically ignore everything that is outside of their province.

Between the devil and the vocal group and the deep blue sea of the Japanese military might, the Nanking government has thus far exhibited a policy of vacillation which should be held partly responsible for the Japanese successes.

Chiang's Four Points Indicated High Courage.

IN A STATEMENT issued on July 19, in reply to a Japanese demand for noninterference in North China's affairs, Gen. Chiang courageously declared that negotiations for a settlement of the incident could commence only on the basis of the following four points:

1. Any kind of settlement must not infringe upon the territorial integrity and sovereign rights of China.

2. The status of the Hopei-Chahar Political Council is fixed by the Central Government, and there must not be any illegal alterations.

3. The Central Government will not agree to the removal by outside pressure of those local officials it has appointed, such as the chairman of the Council (Gen. Sung Cheryuan).

4. The Central Government will not allow any restrictions being placed upon the positions now held by the Twenty-Ninth Army.

China, he emphasized, has reached the last limit of endurance and was ready "to throw the last ounce of energy into the struggle for national existence."

With these strong words, Gen. Chiang proceeded to watch calmly the conquest of North China by the Japanese army, with the ready connivance of Gen. Sung-yuan and lesser, but no less corrupt, luminaries.

The serious responsibility of salvaging North China from the hands of the ambitious and determined Japanese army was thus left upon the shoulders of a group of Chinese generals who obtained their lucrative positions in Peiping and Tientsin at the recommendation of the Japanese army and against the wishes of the Nanking government.

Chief among these were Sung Chen-yuan and Chang Tzu-chung, two uncultured and corrupt generals, who for the past two years have fully demonstrated their willingness to go to any extent to retain their posts.

When the incident broke out, Gen. Sung was staying in a village in a neighboring province, where he was "sweeping the graves of his ancestors." His stay there was, however, ascribed by competent observers less to filial piety than to a desire to escape responsibility for a new Sino-Japanese incident, which are a normal attribute of a North China summer season.

Gen. Sung Succumbed To Japanese Seduction.

DESPITE Gen. Chiang's instructions not to return to Peiping, Gen. Sung succumbed to Japanese pressure and left for Tientsin, where he immediately plunged into conferences with his Japanese taskmasters.

Gen. Chang Tzu-chung, a divisional commander and mayor of Tientsin, was brought by the Japanese army into Hopei from the barren province of Chahar, where his main interest appears to have been a large-scale cultivation of poppy. In Tientsin, his readiness to sanction any Japanese scheme of "Sino-Japanese economic and political co-operation" readily earned for him the gratitude of the Japanese. Privately, Japanese newspapermen told me that in their belief Gen. Chang was "a champion scoundrel."

These, then, were China's representatives in negotiations whose objective was to sever two more prosperous Chinese provinces. The agreements of July 11 and 19 were negotiated by Gen. Chang and approved by Gen. Sung. No reports, it appears, have been made on their contents to the Central Government.

When their troops, thoroughly propagandized by Communists and students, began to fight the Japanese, these generals did everything in their power to place their soldiers at the mercy of the foe. Gen. Sung, while addressing passionate appeals for resistance to the Chinese people, continued to facilitate the Japanese occupation of his bailiwick.

Faced with a fait accompli, the Nanking government announced that it never even thought of opposing the agreements negotiated by Gen. Sung. This was China's first reversal of her original strong stand.

With his troops massacred by the Japanese, Gen. Sung could no longer remain in Peiping. He fled at the last moment with a few other generals. Gen. Chang remained and continued to bargain with the Japanese. His pleas, however, remained unanswered by the Japanese army.

With Chang no longer in authority, Gen. Chiang Kai-sheck then issued a statement in which he subtly blamed the loss of Peiping on Gen. Sung and promised to assume the responsibility for future events himself. This, however, proved to be of little comfort to the men of the Twenty-ninth Army, who had neither leaders nor support.

But Gen. Chiang should not be held alone responsible for the lack of opposition to Japan. He can move his own troops north neither through Shantung nor through Shansi, whose warlords would tolerate no "foreign" troops on their soil. The only way left for the movement of troops is through a narrow opening between the two provinces.

Should Gen. Chiang drain central China of his own troops, his rivals in Kwangsi, Szechuan and a few other provinces are certain to abandon their patriotic breast-beating for more profitable ventures along the Yangtze Valley.

If Gen. Chiang's troops do manage somehow to meet the Japanese in North China, he can never be certain of wholehearted support of other military leaders, who will forever suspect him of wily designs to unseat them.

Moreover, that outright treachery is not impossible was proved by the presence of Chinese troops in the Japanese units which attacked Taku and Tungchow. If national consciousness is to be aroused, more is needed than a mere occupation of Peiping. Signs are not lacking that such a provocation is forthcoming.

State Councils

By Bryant Putney

Advice For Legislators.

WITH CURRENT INTEREST centering on Nebraska's experiment with a single-chamber legislature, little attention has been given to a less spectacular device which many students believe aims at modernizing the legislative process in a much more fundamental way than any such structural change as the creation of a unicameral legislature. This device—the legislative council—has been adopted in eight States within the last six years.

Usually composed of a small number of experienced legislators, and aided by expert advisers, these legislative councils meet between sessions to prepare comprehensive legislative programs for submission to the legislatures. Councils are designed primarily to provide responsible and informed legislative leadership, to promote continuity in the legislative process, and to afford greater opportunity for the expert drafting of legislation.

First established in Wisconsin, in 1931, legislative councils were set up in Kansas and Michigan in 1933, in Virginia and Kentucky in 1936, and in Connecticut, Illinois and Nebraska this year. Bills providing for the creation of similar councils were brought forward in a number of other States at this year's legislative sessions, but none received final approval.

• • • •

LEGISLATIVE COUNCILS provide a medium through which the damaging effects of party rivalry on legislative programs may be reduced and an element of nonpartisan leadership established, some students believe. Membership in existing councils uniformly includes representatives of different political parties and of both houses of the legislature, and providing a medium through which agreement may be reached on a basic program for legislative action.

Bipartisan sponsorship of such a program enhances the likelihood of impartial consideration and, where opposing parties each control one house of the legislature, diminishes the possibility of deadlocks between houses. While the legislative council has power to enforce its views only through "cogent argumentation," Arthur W. Bromage, of the University of Michigan, believes that "it may accumulate prestige as it goes along."

Councils are designed also to prevent deadlocks between the Governor and the Legislature and, in some cases, to serve as continuing critics of administration. In urging the creation of a legislative council in Wisconsin in 1921, Gov. Phillip La Follette declared that such a council represented "an alternative to the drift toward extending arbitrary powers to the Governor and the executive branch of government without some compensating controls."

• • • •

CREATION OF legislative councils to improve the work of State legislatures was proposed by the National Municipal League as early as 1921. The model State constitution drafted by the league in that year provided for a council to be composed of the Governor and seven members of a proposed unicameral legislature. The council was to be empowered: (1) to collect information; (2) to consider and report on proposed laws submitted to it by the Legislature; and (3) to submit to the Legislature such legislation "as in its opinion the welfare of the State may require." The council was to be supplied with a staff agency equipped for investigation and research.

The legislative councils thus far set up in the States generally follow these recommendations. Experience with the Wisconsin council has disappointed proponents of the scheme, but the council established in Kansas in 1933 has been highly successful. This council is composed of 27 members—15 representatives and 10 senators appointed by the presiding officers of each house, who are ex-officio members.

Under the Kansas constitution, regular sessions of the State Legislature are limited to two months every two years. The "pressure and confusion" engendered by this restriction, and the "apparent lack of the council, according to F. H. Guild, it research constituted the primary reasons for the establishment of the council, according to F. H. Guild, its research director.

• • • •

UNDER THE KANSAS system, any member of the Legislature may bring forward proposals for consideration by the council, and any citizen of the State may address it suggesting action. The council either rejects proposed measures or refers them to standing committees, where bills are drafted and comprehensive factual material assembled. Bills or committee reports must receive a two-thirds vote of the council to be "recommended" to the Legislature. Proposals receiving only a majority vote are submitted without recommendation.

The council's chief contribution to the improvement of legislative procedure consists, according to Guild, in clarifying issues requiring legislative action. "Council members serve a very distinct function as assimilators and translators of fundamental background material and as a sifting agency in separating much of the wheat from the chaff. Members who have assimilated the material over a series of quarterly meetings serve a valuable function in clarifying the issues and in keeping discussions on a correct factual basis in regular committees and on the floor."

The Kansas council publishes printed summaries of its reports and recommendations about a month before the regular sessions of the Legislature convene. In addition, its research staff submits research studies covering a wide field of public problems. Sixty per cent of the council bills became laws in the 1933 special session, while 26 per cent were passed in the regular session of 1935. The council's reports played an important part in legislative deliberations.

Shakespeare

By William Lyon Phelps

Tolstoi's Views On Him.

Tolstoi once wrote a book on Shakespeare, in which he attempted to prove that Shakespeare was a very poor writer, not even a good second-class writer; and that his finished plays were inferior to the rather crude sources from which he took them.

This book, written with Tolstoi's customary vigor of expression, illustrated several things. First, that unoriginal remarks about Shakespeare are usually right and that original comments are often wrong. Second, that Tolstoi's chronic lack of appreciation of other great men was never more strikingly in evidence than in that book. Third, that anyone who judges an author by false standards can prove him inferior.

• • • •

Tolstoi, judging the language of Shakespeare and the plots of the plays by the standards of realistic novels, had no difficulty in proving that Shakespeare's language was not the language of real life and that the stories of his plays were improbable. Mark Twain said the annual Treasurer's report lacked color and romance; that it would be improved by a lot of pictures and good anecdotes. But his remarks, meant to be absurd, are no more ridiculous than Tolstoi's on Shakespeare. Tolstoi complained that no one would listen to him; he tried to convince Turgenev that Shakespeare was a bad writer, and Turgenev merely turned away and would not listen.

• • • •

Well, in this final volume of the great Centenary Edition of the Works of Tolstoi, published a few weeks ago, "Recollections and Essays," there is a dissertation filling nearly 80 pages, called "Shakespeare and the Drama." This was written in 1906, only four years before Tolstoi died. He says, "I think Shakespeare cannot be admitted to be either a writer of great genius or even an average one."

Educating For The Mike

The University of Maryland announces that it will give courses for the training of radio announcers and speakers next year, thus making what it says is an entirely new departure in the field of university education.

It might be a good thing if its first class were recruited from the personnel of existing broadcasting stations. It would be no difficult matter to assemble a sizable group of announcers who rattle off their stuff so fast that the listener has trouble to follow them; who slur proper names and unfamiliar words so that they are unintelligible, or who have the provoking habit of letting the voice die away just when the listener is trying to find out who is who or what is what.

Likewise the broadcasters who, especially in announcing sporting events, work themselves into a lather under the impression that they are communicating their artificial excitement to the audience and that the listeners like it, might profitably be told off to man the class rooms of the university when the lectures on how to broadcast begin.

Tom McCarthy

The Postilion
Peeling 'Spuds' For A Meal.

RENO, NEV., Aug. 13.—I had two failures in Reno: One, reportorial; the other, financial. One left me chuckling . . . and the other left me peeling potatoes.

My failure as an enquiring reporter took place up at Lake Tahoe, where I met Jack Doyle, the "Irish Thrush." Doyle, you know, is the crooning Irish fisticuffer who, in the memory of living man, hasn't won a fight. He's up at Lake Tahoe, taking the divorce "cure," and adding the beauty of his unmarked countenance and muscular torso to the already enchanting scenery.

TOM McCARTHY.

A little heavy about the midrift, his muscular back shining with suntan oil, Doyle was relaxing on the beach in a pair of flattering silk trunks when I was introduced to him.

He acknowledged the introduction by murmuring "so glad," or "so pleased" or something equally delicate, in an accent which combined the best features of John McCormack's and the officers' in the Coldstream Guards. Frankly, I'm not at all sure as to just how Mr. Doyle did acknowledge the introduction. Possibly, he simply murmured.

• • • •

IT WAS ALL very embarrasing, because Mr. Doyle is such a delicately mannered chap that it seemed out of place to bring up anything so degrading as prize fighting. I couldn't very well ask him about any of his fights because, if he has anything in common with his public, he should be trying to forget them.

I didn't think that I should ask him how his voice is because, after all, you don't rush up to a stranger and ask if he's in shape for a bit of crooning. I really didn't know what I should do about Mr. Doyle, so I stood there, cleared my throat, remarked on the weather and contented myself with the original murmur I'd obtained from the "Irish Thrush."

The other failure? Well, that was down in Reno. That was financial. I didn't find a job in Reno and, for a time, it didn't matter. The gambling houses, the most going concerns, in the city, don't take on new men casually. The best I could do was to get a promise of work in the future. However, as I said, this didn't bother me very much, because the little ivory ball at the Palace Club, always stopped on "Red."

"—and Red," the houseman said. And I realized that I'd have no trouble in eating for the next few days.

"—and Red," said the houseman. And the matter of living quarters was assured.

Later in the week, as my luck persisted, I was wondering as to just what sort of a boxcar I should use to make my entrance into California. I was undecided as to whether it should be plush lined . . . or simply decorated with gold leaf.

Then the houseman said, "—and Red." But this time I was playing Black, and I saw him reach out and take back the freight car decorated with gold leaf.

Next thing I knew, he'd removed all possiblity of my having even a plush-lined box car for the finish of my trip and then, when the ivory ball concluded its circuit of the roulette basin, I decided I'd better check out of the hotel. After that, I began to wonder where I was going to eat, because the Palace Club had reclaimed my unearned wealth and had reduced me to a state of insolvency more dire than my original condition.

I was going to have the opportunity my good fortune had delayed of seeing just what happens in Reno when you're dead broke. Next, I found myself peeling "spuds" and the memory is one of the happiest of the trip.

• • • •

I WALKED DOWN Virginia street and entered the Monarch Cafe. I asked the girl at the cashier's desk if I might see the manager. The manager, it appeared, was out of town; but, if I were looking for work in the dining room, she would speak to the head waiter.

"If you'll leave your name and address, the headwaiter says he may be able to use you in a few days," the young cashier returned to tell me.

"Well, you see," I said, "it's rather important that I find something to do right away. Possibly there would be some work in the kitchen?" Food was very much in my mind.

The young lady was quite understanding. "Oh, in that case," she said, "you go right back and see the chef."

"If you want to work for a meal, you can peel spuds," said the chef.

I had a vision of myself sitting beside a huge sack of potatoes, whittling them to bits in my initial effort at peeling.

"Glad to," I said.

"Shorty," a little fellow with a cockney accent, initiated me into the mysteries of peeling potatoes.

"It ain't as if it's a 'ard job," he said. "Mostly hit requires judgment."

I discovered that instead of peeling them with a knife, all I had to do was to throw the potatoes into a whirling machine, roughly surfaced on the inside. The machine removed the skins. Then I had to go over the potatoes removing spots, eyes and remains of skin. The trick was in knowing when to stop the machine. If you let it run too long it wasted the potatoes and, if you stopped it too soon, there would be more work by hand. "Hit definitely requires judgment."

• • • •

"SHORTY" WAS A NICE fellow, with a callous exterior and the soft heart bred from being "on the road."

"Put it down" he shouted, as I started to lug a potato sack out of the cellar. "You'll be gettin' your shirt all dirty, and then where'll you be?" He was in deadly earnest and insisted on carrying the hundred-pound sack up the stairs.

"I've got me old clothes on" he said, "and you're wearin' the only ones you've got. Don't be gettin' 'em dirty. You'll need 'em. I've been on the road myself," he explained.

And people who think in terms of "class" feel that they have the monopoly on sensitivity and understanding!

I had been peeling for possibly a half an hour, when "Shorty" came by and asked if I'd like a glass of milk. A moment later, he popped around the corner and shoved a pint bottle of milk toward me.

"I got it when the cook wasn't looking," he said. And I drank it gratefully.

After a while, just as I was beginning to feel that I could rank as an expert potato peeler, the cook came around to tell me I'd worked more than enough.

"Hey there, what're you doing?" he asked. "If you put in any more time, we'll have to take you on the staff. You've earned your meal." He was a pleasant-faced man in his thirties.

They have a democracy in Nevada, which is more than theoretical. Though it was one of the finest restaurants in Reno, they insisted that I, to all appearances, a tramp, go into the main dining room to partake of my meal.

I was served a full course meal, from the regular menu, and plied with all the service which could have been demanded by the most exacting customer. At no time was there any intimation from anyone that I was anything but a welcome guest.

When I left the restaurant, with the intention of hopping a freight for California, I felt that everything was very much right in this world.

A.F.L. to Invade White Collar, Farm Fronts

Plans Counter-Attack in 2 Fields Now Held by C. I. O.

By the Associated Press.

The American Federation of Labor intends to start a counterattack on C. I. O. organizing efforts among agricultural and white collar workers.

William Green, A. F. of L. president, announced yesterday he would set up federation councils in both fields to correlate drives against the Committee for Industrial Organization, headed by John L. Lewis.

So far there has been no national A. F. of L. organization among either agricultural or white collar workers. A. F. of L. members in each group were taken into locals directly affiliated with the federation.

Invasion Prompts Fight.

A group of these locals in each field repeatedly has applied for a national union charter, but the federation has turned them down on the ground that the unions were not strong enough for independence.

Lewis' invasion of this territory with the United Agricultural and Cannery Workers and the United Office and Professional Workers prompted the federation to fight back.

Green said the formation of councils—each to include representatives of all loyal locals—would be the first step toward granting A. F. of L. charters to both groups.

Work Set for Convention.

The office workers probably will set up their council during the A. F. of L.'s October convention in Denver, Green said. Date for the agricultural and packing house workers' meeting had not yet been set.

The C. I. O., meanwhile, said the United Office and Professional Workers now include 36 locals with 22,000 members in 29 cities. Nineteen of these locals, it added, have seceded from the A. F. of L.

The United Agricultural and Cannery Workers claimed a membership of 60,000 in 23 States. Fifty-six A. F. of L. locals, the union said, voted to join the C. I. O. at a recent convention.

Auto Vacationers Travel 550 Miles Farther This Year

The average Washingtonian is traveling 550 miles farther on his vacation trip this year than he did in 1936, according to the A. A. A. District of Columbia Motor Club. Club officials consider this increase in motor travel a hopeful indication that prosperity is here to stay.

Last year the club estimated the average trip at 1,000 miles. Not only has this distance increased to 1,550 during the first seven months of 1937, but the number of vacation motorists has risen 44 per cent. General Manager Russell E. Singer of the A. A. A. reports that the popularity of vacation resorts varies little from year to year.

West, New Deal's Contact Man, Denies He'd Blackjack Congress

Claims to Be Only a 'Feeler-Outer,' But Minority Leader Snell Calls His 'Lobbying' a 'Damned Outrage.'

By the Associated Press.

Long-legged Charles H. West says he is a Presidential "feeler-outer" and not one who would go around blackjacking members of Congress into line with Administration ideas.

West, Undersecretary of the Interior, who is best known as the White House contact man for Congress, is a little hot under the collar about things some of the boys said privately after his trip to the House of Representatives last week.

He would not be quoted nor would any of his critics, and no one could lay a finger on anything he did, but it was noted in the press gallery that shortly after West talked to Majority Leader Rayburn, of Texas, the Rules Committee failed to meet as scheduled.

The committee had been expected to consider the storm-tossed wage and hour bill. A majority is reported to be against the Administration on the issue, and it is anybody's guess whether or why Charley may have caused the committee to delay action.

Anyway, the towering thin-faced former Representative from Ohio, who laughs at the kidding about his big ears, swung out of the speaker's lobby with a pack of 5-feet 8-inch newspaper reporters following him. He trotted away like a Great Dane.

"I'm just feeling out sentiment," he tossed over his shoulder to those who tagged him as a "high-pressure man."

That is one of Charley's chief characteristics. He knows how to evade direct questions.

Not that he doesn't like people. He is one of the most eager and persuasive talkers in the Capital. He got that way as a "Ph. D." teaching political science, international relations and economics at Wooster, Harvard, Tufts and Denison Universities. But he also knows what not to say.

Some complain Charley never can be found. That is true unless a key man in Congress is doing the searching. He always bobs up when an Administration finger is about to get burned.

Representative Snell (Republican), New York, House minority leader, once said it was a "damned outrage" the way Charley came on the House floor "lobbying for the Administration." He threatened to have it stopped, but he didn't stop liking Charley.

He doesn't show up in the House lobby as often as he did, but whenever he does at least a half-dozen members clutch at his coat to pour out their hopes or woes. He is jolly, but when he leaves, they are still wondering, "So what?"

Trade to Resume Rise by Year-End, U.S. Experts Say

By the Associated Press.

Government prophets of business and trade trends predicted yesterday the upward spiral of industry and commerce—which has levelled off in recent months—will be resumed about at the end of this year.

The bureau of agricultural economics, after an analysis of industrial and financial charts, said:

"There appears to be little doubt that we are still in the advancing phase of the business cycle, and that sooner or later the upward movement which characterized most of the period since early 1933 will be continued."

The economists said they expect few spurts in industrial production "during the remainder of this year, at least," but are optimistic for the period following.

Among favorable factors for continuing "last year's marked upswing in business" they listed:

"Excellent crop prospects, decreased labor unrest, generally improved business sentiment, easy credit, the still large replacement needs arising from purchases deferred during the depression, improved world trade conditions, and the general impetus of the recovery movement."

College Honors D. C. Boy.

Winifred Willard, of Washington, won a place on the second semester high scholarship roll of Washington State College, at Pullman, Wash., it was announced yesterday by President E. O. Holland. To be eligible for this honor a student must earn 34 grade points or make a grade average of 90 per cent while carrying a full college course.

Younger Set Is Preparing For School

Senorita de los Rios May Return to Studies at G. W. U.

Jean Wallace Will Be Senior at Cathedral; Brothers at Yale.

If summer comes, can September be far behind?

And with September at our right hand, it's only a matter of a few weeks until it's over the hill to the little red schoolhouse — for Washington's younger set, that is.

Miss An-fu Wang, daughter of Dr. Chengting T. Wang, the Chinese Ambassador, is just completing a summer course of study at the George Washington University, proving that she isn't afraid to tackle books and a few quizz sections even in the hottest weather.

Senorita Laura de los Rios, daughter of the Spanish Ambassador, Dr. Fernando de los Rios, who carried a heavy schedule at George Washington last winter, perhaps may return to the halls and academic ivy of education when the registrar's office opens for its first busy—and hectic—day.

Senorita de los Rios specialized in English literature last year and now most likely can declaim Shelley by heart. She already has a long scholastic record behind her, having studied at the University of Madrid and also at the Sorbonne in Paris.

Miss Jean Wallace, daughter of the Secretary of Agriculture, will be in her fourth year of high school at the Cathedral School when sessions get under way there in September. Her two older brothers will return to Yale.

* * * *

Compasses always point north, but they seem to turn more steadfastly in that direction in the summer time than at any other season of the year.

With the Narragansett colony just recovering from the excitement of the week-end's special tennis match at the Point Judith Country Club between the Oxford-Cambridge and the North-Carolina team, and today in the throes of the centaur encounter between the Santa Barbara polo team and the Meadowbrook Pelicans for the Rathbone Memorial Cups, there is hardly an inch of good Rhode Island earth that isn't covered with sporting enthusiasts.

On the sidelines, however, at the Dunes Club, Senator Burton K. Wheeler and Mrs. Wheeler are forgetting about gallery gophers in Washington, as they are feted at a luncheon given by Florrimon M. Rowe, of Providence.

Yesterday they were guests of honor at another luncheon given by former Senator Felix Herbert and Mrs. Herbert, who invited them out to their country place in Warwick for the occasion.

Things still go racing along at Saratoga, and among those occupying the Spa's golden horseshoes at the track are Mr. and Mrs. Ogden L. Mills who saw the historic Travers Derby yesterday.

SOCIAL NOTES

Miss McNeill Will Be Wed In October

Engagement to Joseph Davidson Easley Is Announced.

Bride-Elect Descendant of Washington, William Henry Harrison.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. McNeill, of 3212 Garfield street, announces the engagement of their daughter, Frances Harrison McNeill, to Joseph Davidson Easley. The marriage will take place in October.

Miss McNeill attended National Cathedral School in Washington, Meredith College in North Carolina and George Washington University. She is a member of Chi Omega Sorority.

Mr. Easley came to Washington about two years ago from Statesville, N. C. He was educated in the schools of Nashville, Tenn. His father, Dr. Philip S. Easley, who lives in St. Louis, is a colonel in the United States Army Reserve.

Miss McNeil is descended from the ancient Clan Macneil, of Scotland, and, on her mother's side, she is a descendant of William Henry Harrison.

ABOUT THE TOWN

With Dudley Harmon.

WHEN "Lohengrin" comes to Lafayette Square, it means marching orders for the White House aides, the end of whose bachelor days coincides with the finish of their duty at the Executive Mansion. Marriages during the past year have somewhat thinned the ranks, and replacements of the benedicts continue to be in order.

Latest to be named to a post there is Capt. William Saunders of the Marine Corps, who succeeds Lieut. Clyde Hartsel, a recent bridegroom. (Believe it or not, Lieut. Hartsel, whose number at the Navy Department is 22, lives in Apartment 22 at 2222 Q street.

Besides being something of an honor, appointment as a White House aide also means lots of fun. The chance of being called in to fill in at a cozy family dinner party there more than makes up for deadly hours spent herding people back and forth at State receptions. One aide was called in almost the first week of his new job to dine with President and Mrs. Roosevelt, Mme. Jusserand, who was visiting at the White House, and one or two others.

Anyone who has ever been to a party at the White House admires the way in which the aides—so subtly—get people to go home at a certain hour. No matter how reluctant you are to go, you suddenly have an uncanny feeling that many gimlet eyes are boring into you. You turn around to see a phalanx of pleasant aides lined up in an unobtrusive way, and just staring. You hastily retreat, feeling faintly apologetic. Quite a system!

WITH the Scottish grouse in an unpleasant state of mortal danger since the shooting season opened on Thursday, Washington is fairly well represented on the moors, as such things go. Remember that it costs oodles even to lease a box in the vicinity, and the only American who owns his own is J. P. Morgan.

Walter Edge, former Ambassador to France, and Hugh D. Auchincloss, both of the Capital, are among those out for birds in the Highlands. Mr. and Mrs. Fleming Newbold and their daughter, Miss Nancy Newbold, are bound for Scotland next week, but they intend to leave the grouse indisturbed.

This bird offers a challenge to even the most skillful sportsman, as it is quick as lightning. The most baffling American game birds, such as the Bob White, are pushovers by comparison.

MRS. Emory Sands and the Robert Joyces, who leased Col. William Donovan's house until September 15, have been having a terrible summer. All because Col. Donovan thought "North 2727" a convenient number, easily remembered, and selected it for his telephone.

His tenants agreed with him at first, until people began to call up and ask what time the baseball game began. Other strangers telephoned to see if they could borrow some particularly rare book. The baffled Joyces soon discovered that the ball park is North. 2707, and the Library of Congress National 2725, all of which makes for continual confusion in their menage.

Things finally come to the point when the Joyces and Mrs. Sands put a supervisor on their line to see they got no more baseball or rare book queries. They thought it would work out beautifully until they found they had to fight the supervisor themselves to get their own home when the occasion arose. Now the supervisor is off again, and the Joyces and Mrs. Sands are still referring people to the Congressional Library or the ball park, although not so patiently as earlier in the summer.

Middies Mingle With Cadets in Social Events

Series of Parties Held at Old Point Comfort, Va., for Visitors.

At Old Point Comfort, Va., the natty gray unifroms of West Point and the gold and blue of the Middies from Annapolis will merge into the conventional "whites" this week while both the Cadets and the Middies are being entertained at a series of social functions marking their visit there.

Saturday night a series of informal receptions and house parties were held for the 300 West Pointers who arrived Saturday morning for their annual tour of summer duty at Fort Monroe. Many of them attended the supper dance in the Yacht room of the Chamberlain.

Among the Washington Army set now staying at the Hotel Chamberlain are Maj. and Mrs. W. P. Scobey, and Lieut. Col. and Mrs. W. L. Wattles, who will be at Old Point Comfort for the festive "service" weeks. Other Washingtonians at the Chamberlin are Mrs. George A. Drury, Mr. and Mrs. E. Y. Olney, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Jacobi, Mrs. Wallace Leek, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Sells, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. German, and Mrs. Winifred Grant.

Mary Hopkins, J. Yznaga Wed

Ceremony Takes Place at Bride's Home in Woodside Park.

The marriage of Miss Mary Georgia Hopkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ward Hopkins, of Woodside Park, Md., and John Alexis Yznaga, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexis Combs Yznaga, of Washington, took place yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents on Noyes drive. Dr. Ralph D. Smith, pastor of the Woodside Methodist Episcopal Church, performed the ceremony, using the ring with which the bride's grandmother was married.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin, made on princess lines with a long graceful train. Her tulle veil was caught on either side with gardenias and she carried an old-fashioned bouquet of gardenias. Her only ornament was a heart-shaped brooch of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom, which his grandfather had given to his bride for her wedding.

Mrs. Thomas Glover, of Sanford, N. C., sister of the bride, was matron of honor, wearing a gown of flesh-colored marquisette, made with a bouffant skirt.

The best man was George Sutherland Elmore, of Washington, grandson of Chief Justice Sutherland of the United States Supreme Court.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held. Mrs. Hopkins, mother of the bride, who wore a flowered marquisette gown, and Mrs. Yznaga, mother of the bridegroom, whose costume was of ashes of roses flowered chiffon, assisting in receiving. Both Mrs. Yznaga and Mrs. Hopkins wore corsage bouquets of delphinium and lilies of the valley.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Yznaga left on their wedding trip, the bride wearing a traveling costume of navy blue, with an aquamarine blouse and aquamarine top coat. On their return they will make their home at 4800 Connecticut avenue.

Miss Luz de Corral Feted at Luncheon

Miss Charlotte Gartner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Gartner, whose marriage to Joseph F. Daly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy J. Daly, takes place on September 1, has as her guest Miss Maria Luz de Corral, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernardino de Corral, of Bilbao, Spain, and Santurce, Puerto Rico.

Among the guests present at a luncheon given recently by Miss Gartner in honor of Miss de Corral were Miss Gartner's wedding attendants, Miss Margaret O'Donnell, Miss Eileen Daly and Miss Regis Boyle.

Miss Gartner was feted a few days ago at a pre-nuptial supper party at which Miss Elizabeth O'Connor was the hostess.

F STREET AT FOURTEENTH

THIS WEEK IN THE CLUBS

AUXILIARY HEAD

MRS. OSCAR W. HAHN, national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, who arrives today from Wayne, Nebr., to attend the convention of the Department of the District of Columbia, which opens tonight at 8 o'clock in the Red Cross Chapter House.

Head of D. C. Legion Auxiliary Honored at Testimonial Dinner

Mrs. Mary K. Killeen Given Recognition for Progress of Group During Her Leadership; Membership Now 1,500.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

MRS. MARY K. KILLEEN last night was honored at a testimonial banquet given at the Lafayette Hotel by a group of members of the American Legion Auxiliary, Department of the District of Columbia, of which she is president. About 100 were present including officers and past presidents of the department. Mrs. Thomas Gorsuch, chairman of the dinner arrangements, and Mrs. Martin A. Dyer, a past president of the department and also distinguished guest chairman, received with the guest of honor. Mrs. Dyer also presided at the dinner.

The affair was given in appreciation of the progress made during the past year under Mrs. Killeen's leadership. The membership of the department which includes 16 American Legion Auxiliary units has grown from 800 to 1,500 since she took office. It has also broadened the scope of its work in rehabilitation and child welfare, the most important of its activities.

Mrs. Killeen Gold Star Mother

Mrs. Killeen is a Gold Star Mother as well as a prominent worker in the auxiliary. It is for her son, George Killeen, one of the first Americans killed in action overseas during the World War, that the Killeen Post of the legion and the Killeen Unit of the legion auxiliary are named.

Among other guests at the head table last night were Lieut. Horace Lineburg, outgoing department commander of the legion; Lieut. Thomas Mason, incoming commander; Mrs. Mason, Joseph Malloy, national executive committeeman of the legion; Col. and Mrs. Julius Peyser, Fred Fraser, a past department commander; Miss Bess Faine, chapeau of the Eight and Forty; John McCabe chief detrain of the Forty and Eight, Mrs. Estelle Hunter Dean, who sang a group of songs, and Mrs. McCabe.

The past department presidents of the auxiliary who were present included Mrs. Leon Arnold, Mrs. Thomas Fawcett, Miss Edna McIntosh and Mrs. Edgar B. Corwin. Miss Emily Carey, of Belleau Wood Post, past department vice president of the legion, and Miss Anne Bryde, director of welfare for the legion, also were guests.

Department Opens Convention Tonight

The banquet last night preceded the opening this evening of the annual department convention for which Miss McIntosh is chairman of program. The opening session will be at 8 o'clock in the Red Cross Chapter House, with Mrs. Oscar W. Hahn, of Wayne, Nebr., national president, among the distinguished guests.

Mrs. Hahn is arriving this afternoon by plane and will be met by Mrs. Dyer. She was elected at the auxiliary's national convention in Cleveland, and, under her leadership, the broad program of civic and patriotic activities drafted at the convention has been undertaken. Her record was so outstanding that her candidacy was unopposed for the office of president and she was unanimously elected.

At the time of her election, Mrs. Hahn was directing the Nation-wide activities of the auxiliary for the welfare of disabled World War veterans as chairman of the national rehabilitation committee. In 1934 she was elected national historian and in this office directed the preparation and publishing of a history of the auxiliary which has been acclaimed by critics as an exceptional work of its kind. She will be one of the speakers on tonight's program.

'The Drunkard' At the Sylvan

St. Thomas Players and Langley Club Present Play Tomorrow.

Members of the Dramatic Club of St. Thomas Episcopal Church (which the President attends) under the direction of Miss Mary M Osterloh, will assist the Langley Lambs Club in the summer festival performance of "The Drunkard" tomorrow night. It will be at 8 o'clock in the Sylvan Theater at the Washington Monument.

Among those who will attend the play are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott Watson, Mr. and Mrs. George Converse Wetherill, Miss Susan Kintner, Miss Helene Kravatz, Dr. Edwin O'Brien, Mr. Harrison Bates, Mr. James Foster, Mr. Paul Brand, Mr. Paul Walter and other drama enthusiasts, many of whom are arranging parties for the play.

In compliment to their fellow players at Langley-McKinley Center, members of the Eckington Players, Miss Margaret McDowell, Miss Margaret King and Miss Mae Weyrich, will assist the summer festival committee as ushers, in addition to the group of Girl Reserves who have assisted at all festivals during the season.

Reservations may be made, or those wishing to do so are invited by the committee to sit on the grass for the performance.

Guests at Cottage.

The Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza had guests with them over the week-end at their cottage at Sherwood Forest.

Duchess of Windsor Effect Is Exhibited in New Corselet Waistline for Autumn Styles

Black Leads For Milady's Latest Trend

Dresses Will Be Simple and Made of Silk or Crepe.

Fashions Are Versatile and Offer Chance to Be Individual.

Your fall wardrobe is of paramount importance and you will want to know about the new lines, fabrics and colors before starting your planning and shopping. The Post Fashion Editor is writing a series of articles from the New York markets on the fall style trends, to aid Washington women in their wardrobe planning. This is the third in the series.

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Your first fall dress will be black and made of silk or synthetic crepe. It will be simple of line and fitted well to the figure, high of neckline and short of skirt, with a draped bodice, pencil-slim skirt and smooth diaphragm. It will have long or short sleeves, either beltless or with a smart belt defining the high or low waistline. The material may be dull or shiny, smooth or stressing unusual surface interest, and the ensemble may be all black or highlighted with brilliant color tones.

You can judge from the foregoing that the new styles are extremely versatile, and there is a grand chance to be individual and still be in tune with the fashion picture. Whatever your choice, the new black dresses are comfortable and easy to wear, at the same time possessing a maximum of smartness.

Corselet Waistline.

The corselet waistline, sponsored by the Duchess of Windsor, promises to be one of the most popular stylings for fall and winter. Sometimes lastex is used with the dress fabric to stress this small waist effect. Virtually all dresses are shaped from bustline to waistline, following the general theme to mold the figure into sculptured lines. Broad shoulders in frocks are a thing of the past; if there is shoulder treatment of any kind, the effect is flat rather than high, as of last season. Some dresses are fashioned with a lowered V neckline and front draping in both the bodice and skirt; these are comfortable and smart for midseason, but high neckline is considered newer and more chic.

Satin and dull crepes share fabric honors about equally, the choice depending upon personal preference and your own silhouette; shiny materials, however, are particularly adapted to the slim figure. Embroideries are fashion news this season, giving daytime dresses that touch of glitter, in keeping with the current trend toward elegance and luxury, noted throughout the entire wardrobe. This is accomplished by sequins, gold threads, mirrors and rhinestones, in flower and conventional patterns. Pipings of gold or silver kid, give an otherwise simple black dress an air of richness, and this type of fabric and color contrast is much in evidence, especially in the tailored stylings.

Bright Accents.

Whether you make your first appearance in fall raiment in all black or black accented with brilliant color, is a matter for you to decide, as both interpretations are considered fashion correct by Paris and New York. Bright color tones are very much in the spotlight, as an accent on black this fall, and the majority of women are taking advantage of this vouge, in preference to the all-black theme. It can be smartly achieved by two different methods—black with gay accessories, or a black frock with bright trimming.

A slim black dress of either satin or crepe, offset with red, green, mustard yellow, royal blue, or violet, gloves and hat trimmings (or the entire hat of the contrasting color), is one of the current smart trends here in New York. Black, with jewelry as the only note of contrast, is another popular trend; usually massive looking gold or silver colored metal necklaces, clips or pins at the throat and wide, heavy looking bracelets.

Tomorrow—The New Silhouette, as Expressed in Foundation Garments.

A smart version of the popular corselet waist is interpreted in the black silk crepe frock, below. Note the clever sleeve treatment and touch of glitter given by tiny collar and pocket of sequins. The black velvet visor hat with high crown, designed by Nell Langon, supplies a spot of color in its feather trimming. At right, one of the smart novelty rayon fabrics, featuring shiny and dull effects. The high toque with unusual veil, designed by Louisesanders, is of black antelope.

The new pencil-like, beltless silhouette (below) of rayon-barred crepe is dramatized by narrow fringe extending around the skirt, following the diagonal tucking. Note the flattering neckline. A black frock, ideal for fall and on into winter; designed by Pauline Fields.

The GENTLER SEX

By Melvina Lindsay.

AT THE OFFICE

In the Nursery.

"Haven't you had your vacation YET?"

"No, I won't go for another week, of course, everybody else had to have theirs before me. I'm always the goat."

"I'm the goat, too. Look at me—I had to go in June. And then do everybody else's work after I came back."

"None of the other departments have to double up and work the way we do on vacation. I've had to be two people all summer."

"I've had to be four. You know I just sat down the other day and made a list of all the things I have to do. It took me two hours."

"Say, it'd take me all day just to think over all I have to do.

"This department's always been the goat. Look at the girls in the morale department. I just ask you—what DO they do? Another thing they've got two more fans than we have."

"Well, I know one thing—this office is going to find out a lot of things when I go on my vacation. Whoever does my work is not going to fool around with all this detail."

"My work certainly was in a mess when I came back. You know what I'd like to do. I'd just like to quit once and let them find out how much I do."

"I would, too—only they wouldn't appreciate it."

Main Street.

"Guess who I saw going out of the building together. Vera Skitt and that new man in the accounting department."

"Is he married?"

"Married! Why he's got four children—no I believe it's five—well, anyway, it's at least four."

"Do you suppose they could have been going to lunch together?"

"Well, they were certainly going somewhere."

"Well, of course, I'm terribly broad minded about such things, but I think a girl around an office ought to be careful. People are so catty. Look at the way everybody talks about Mabel Bing and that man she meets for lunch. Of course, I admit there's something funny about that whole business. Nobody knows anything about him."

"I wonder why they don't get married."

"It is funny. And look at Margie Mish and George Jitter. Why don't they get married? And Grace Podge. Did you know she got a special every day from that man that went to Texas? Why don't they get married?"

"Did you know Archie Link was going to drive Ruby Mott to Atlantic City for her vacation?"

"No! I wonder if they won't get married?"

"I'd think so. This is two vacations they've taken at the same time. They ought to get married."

"If they don't watch out everybody'll be talking about them. Now, I never pay any attention to those things. I always say a person's personal affairs are their personal affairs. But a lot of women around offices are so nosey."

"Isn't that the truth? That's one reason I hate to work with a bunch of women. They're always so gossipy."

Jungle Town.

"What do you think of the new girl that's taken Miss Chutt's place?"

"O—o—h, she's all right."

"They say she's making a perfectly fabulous salary."

"I heard she was getting thirty-five."

"Thirty-five! I heard it was fifty-five. But I bet it's a lot more than that. I bet she gets seventy-five if she gets a cent."

"Well that certainly makes me sick. After I've slaved here all these years! And then bring in somebody from the outside and pay 'em seventy-five—or a hundred a week!

"Well of course there's one thing about her—she's got plenty of self-confidence."

"I guess that's about all it takes. That's what's always been the matter with me."

"Me too. I just can't sell myself."

"I notice one thing about her—the men all seem to like her.'

"They WOULD."

"Well I guess that's about all it takes. If I ever take another job, do you know what I'm going to do? I'm going to start using my sex appeal."

Old Dumb Waiters Serve Needs Today

Dumb waiters were an English invention of the eighteenth century, which consisted of tiers or trays affixed to a central support on a tripod base. They were usually placed diagonally at the corners of the dining table so that diners might help themselves after the servants had departed. One of Chippendale's early bills mentions "two mahogany dumb waiters on castors" which were supplied to Kensington Palace.

These tiered tables are reproduced today for use not only in the dining room but in the living room as well. They may serve as lamp tables or to hold flower bowls, bits of interesting glass and bric-a-brac or for various other purposes.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Aug. 15.

NEW YORK housewives are now in a dudgeon 400 feet higher than the Empire State Building, for the jolly old inevitable has happened. Our dime-snatching landlords have heard a rumor that the depression is over, and are putting on the screws after several years of cut-rate rents on these airless cells they call "apartments."

ALICE HUGHES.

My real-estate bandits tell me that for some strange reason Manhattan rentals did not hit their low until 1935, when the worst was over, and most of us were eating again—even if not very well. But now that we are within a short jump of that annual Gotham Gehenna known as "lease day," October 1—usually called "The Black First"—some foul fiend has tipped the owners off about the alleged Upturn, and the scoundrels are upon us with fountain pens poised to stab us in the checkbook. Rents are skyshooting up all over this shrieking city—and especially, it seems to me, right here in my own little Murray Hill pueblo, which has been practically a Christmas present since '33. And I don't have to tell you people that it hurts terrible, and that drug stores sell nothing that eases the agony!

* * * *

I don't believe that our people are now doing so well that they can bear very heavy tilts, but that's just one weak woman's opinion. After all, the owners call the tune, and we are forced to do the truckin'. My landlord's lashed out at me with a nasty rise, but I fought them down in 15 fast rounds of talk. Even so, and no doubt many of you are in the same pickle-boat, it's a bad business. I fear I shall have to rent young Martin to some carnival show, and perhaps even get the poor old battered helpmate a WPA job watching a coal-pile!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Speaking of the little home for which I am pledged to give up a Balkan Ransom for the next two years (I should live so long!), a new curse has come to it. Not only do eight or ten unknown neighbors turn their filthy radios on full tilt at 8 a. m., but there is a new friend in the courtyard. He seems to be a devoted student of the tin whistle, and practices the same silly piece every morning, starting on the dot of 9. So if you read of one of our typical and delightful ax-murders, the chances are that poor old Hughes will be in the Thirty-fifth street calaboose getting the third and fourth degree.

Improve Your English

JOAN wants to help her husband. She tries so hard to impress Mrs. High, who's the wife of his new employer. But by her bad breaks in English she shocks instead!

"Come in and SET down," she says. "I'm glad to see you. I BEEN lonesome since I COME to Midtown though I've had a SIGHT TO DO fixing up. I'D OUGHT TO BE DONE soon."

What does Mrs. High think? "She'd be charming if she didn't make such mistakes! How CAN she and her husband get ahead?"

And next day Mr. High listens critically to his new employe. Yes, he, too, is careless; "Between him and I." "All of we salesmen."

A quick check-up would show Joan that she should say SIT down when she refers to a person sitting. She'd see that "I have been" is right and not "I been;" "I came" and not "I come," for the past tense. "A lot to do" is correct and not a "sight to do;" "I could finish" and not "I'd ought to be done."

Once you know educated people say "between him and me;" "all we salesmen" you won't forget!

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Scientific Shaving

We had some very good advice on shaving from Jerome Ephraim (reported in this column in May), and it proves sound when examined against the first elaborate scientific study of shaving ever made and reported last month from the Mellon institute.

This is properly a health subject, and is of sufficient importance to be given plenty of prominence and publicity. There is nothing more luxurious than a good shave, and nothing more annoying than a poor one; and the annoyance lasts all day with a rough, stinging, sore face. It certainly deserves enough attention that the shaver should take the most loving care of his instruments and all the appliances, such as soap and brush and water.

Nowadays it is a subject of interest to women as well as men, since the removal of hair from legs is considered so desirable, and since shaving is considered by dermatologists as the best way of removing hair (removal of superfluous hair permanently is best done by electrolysis). So we intend to review this Mellon report at some length.

A little history is interesting. I suppose everyone has wondered how the Romans, who are always depicted with smooth faces, shaved. It doesn't seem to have been as much of a problem with the Greeks and ancient Hebrews, if we can believe the classic representations of such typical worthies as Socrates and Moses. The Romans had good metal implements.

Coming down to today, everyone discusses the relative "toughness" of beards. Some men think they have very tough beards, and their ideas appear to be borne out by the Mellon research. Of the shavers under observation in their shaving clinic, there were 20 blonds and 11 brunets. Five of the blonds and six of the brunets had very course beard hair.

The upper lip and the chin give more trouble than any other part of the face because the coarse hairs grow there more abundantly. There are 80 to 110 hairs on the upper lip, 70 to 120 on the chin, as against 20 to 40 on the lower cheek, and 30 to 80 on the upper cheek. Besides, of course, the contours of the lip and chin are more uneven and the surfaces more difficult to get at than the cheek.

Cooking Brown Rice.

Brown rice requires longer cooking than white rice. It is done if it is very soft when pressed with a fork. It is often advisable to soak brown rice overnight in water and then cook it in the same water.

Choosing Peaches.

Inspect peaches carefully. Those that are over-ripe or very soft will spoil quickly.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

15-Year-Old Girl Asks Help in Persuading Mother to Let Her Stay Out With "The Crowd" Until 11:30.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 15 but everyone thinks I'm older, which makes me very happy; although I know I will want to turn back when I really get older. Naturally, I enjoy going out nights. I don't care much for dates but I love to go with the crowd. My problem is my mother. She is rather young and very modern in her attitude toward me so far as clothes and cosmetics go; but when it comes to going out at nights, that's something very different!

* * * *

All the girls I go with are about my age. Some of the boys are three or four years older. However, none of the other mothers are as young as mine, although all of them have younger ideas. When I go out, mother usually says: "You be home by 10 o'clock and not one minute later, or else it's going to be you and me!" She doesn't mean a fight, of course, but a bawling-out. And then I can't go out any more nights until she gets good and ready to let me go.

* * * *

Mother says daddy jumps all over her for letting me go out at all. He says I go too much. The truth is, I don't go enough, with the result that when I do get out I try to have as much fun as possible in one evening, because an argument is liable to come up and I'll have to stay in for a long while again. Once in a long while I'm a little late getting in and they make it sound as though I'm always late.

* * * *

Lots of times I manage to talk mother into a 10:30 limit, yet all the others can stay out until 11:30 or sometimes 12 o'clock. I don't mind coming in at 10:30 on Friday and Saturday nights during scool term, but during vacation it's different. The others don't exactly tease me, but they do feel sorry for me and that embarasses me. Even the other mothers have told me they think my mother is too strict. I've talked to her and told her the same things I have told you, but she still thinks she is right and everybody else is wrong. Please help me.

STAY-AT-HOME.

Don't Ask Too Much.

DEAR STAY-AT-HOME: Since your mother permits you to "go with a crowd" whose members are privileged to stay out until 11:30 o'clock, unquestionably she is placing you in an embarassing position by demanding that you be home at 10 or 10:30 o'clock. But if your father is opposed to your going out at all, perhaps your position is no more embarassing than hers. It's just possible she has far more sympathy with your predicament than you have with hers. Perhaps she's giving you all the rope she can. Your father might crack own on dboth of you like the well-known ton of brick and arbitrarily decree "no more nights out" if she countenanced an 11:30 o'clock curfew.

* * * *

In my opinion, 10:30 o'clock at night should find 15-year-old girls either at home or on their way homeward, except on special gala occasions. If you expect to be permitted out every night, or nearly every night, until 11:30 o'clock, you are asking too much, regardless of what all your friends' mothers may think to the contrary. At your age, most of your social interchange with "the Crowd" should be dispatched during daytime and early evening hours. This is plain common sense and has nothing to do with prudery. It is a matter of proper physical and social development. Your future health depends upon observing sane and regular hours, and your whole social perspective might be thrown out of balance by acquiring a taste for night life at so impressionable an age.

* * * *

Remember that "self-pity comes so naturally to all of us that the most solid happiness can be shaken by the compassion of a fool," and don't take your friends' commiserating attitude too seriously. After all, the fact that you are expected to be home by 10:30 o'clock invests you with a certain distinction. When you are a little older, you will appreciate that fact more fully and probably be grateful to your parents for having brought you up just a little differently from "the crowd."

* * * *

To illustrate (and this is a true story—believe it or not): some months ago a young woman of my acquaintance (much older than you) was laughing about the "hit" she had made with a worldly-wise young man. She is a business girl and lives with her mother at a quiet hotel. When mother thinks daughter has been out too late on too many consecutive evenings, she protests. One evening daughter was invited out by a sophisticated young professional man, a graduate of one of the more famous Eastern universities. They "did the town" and returned to the hotel around midnigt, as daughter had promised mother she would be home by 12. They were lingering in the lounge when mother dispatched a summons to daughter to come to bed!

* * * *

Up to that moment the young man's interest in the girl was more or less casual. The summons seemed to astound, then to delight him. "Gosh," he said, or words to that effect. "This is the first time in years I've been out with a girl who seemed to have any respect for her mother's opinion; or whose mother seemed to have any of the good old-fashioned interest in her daughter's affairs! I've got to look into this. When can I see you again?" Which proves, I hope, that there is something to be said for not following in every detail the pattern of the pack.

Low-Heeled Shoes Urged by European

For that poised and graceful gait so alluring in a woman, wear low-heeled shoes, a European foot specialist advises.

"Observe from the back a woman walking in shoes with high heels," he declares. "Every step she makes totters as if trying to find its balance. The step is short because she is compelled to support the body quickly with the free foot, lest she fall forward. This is the reason why most women walking in shoes with high heels take quick, short steps."

Another story I don't believe, which brings pious chuckles at shabby-genteel parties, is about John L. Lewis' negotiations with an architect about a remodeling job.

"My services will be 10 per cent of the total cost," said the architect, with dignity, in response to a query.

"Isn't that pretty steep?" asks Mr. Lewis in the legend, as he probably wouldn't. "I could get it done for less."

"Yes," replies the architect, as he doubtless would, "there are scabs in every trade."

Ukase at the Westchester: "Any disturbance caused by barking will not be allowed" . . . Does that mean compulsory muzzles or ear plugs? . . . Have you been invited to any File 213 weddings since husbands and wives in Government service were sanctified by law? . . . I mean weddings of the civil servants who were pictured so poignantly as living reluctantly in sin.

• • • •

How it annoys the genteel big hotels and apartment houses when the frugal resident statesmen send out their laundry and bring in groceries and soda water from outside! . . . At a recent press conference the President talked of crop loans with reckless abandon of a J. P. Morgan.

"—the first sign of decadence"

To nervous souls who have read "The Decline and Fall" the appearance of a trained bear on the Shorehame terrace may seem to be the first stigma of decadence in the Republic . . . Senators like the 50-cent lamb stew luncheon at their restaurant, but their guests are more apt to order planked steak at 75 cents (which would cost $1.50 anywhere else).

• • • •

Removal of the Capital to a cooler clime, argue the members of Congress whose bedrooms are too hot, would merely mean the abandonment of $228,000,000 worth of buildings . . . But it might be simpler and cost less to put the whole thing in a trailer caravan and move it hither and yon with the seasons and the changing requirements of the electorate.

• • • •

An unrecognized Senator lost his patience with a flunky the other evening and threatened to slap his face . . . Maybe members should wear red, white and blue rosettes in their lapels . . . The new cigarette girl on the terrace is very, very pretty, but she hasn't learned to glide yet . . . (She should, because her job is one of the more important American diplomatic posts.)

Habitues of the various press conferences, from the White House down, surmise that while they are not the ideally functional method of disseminating news, yet they are a pleasant democratic custom and should survive . . . The President himself answers just enough questions to keep his press conference from lapsing into doldrums—and the press emerges with a bracing sense of invigoration on a warm day.

"—horses and bikes the solution"

Probably an augmented use of horses and bicycles by our statesmen is the only solution of Washington's parking problem . . . It might prove a better memorial to Jefferson, who was quite a horseman, than any yet suggested . . . About half the Senators who will vote to confirm Mr. Black's appointment to the Supreme Court today will think privately—and not so very privately, at that—that they are better lawyers than he is.

With all his clothes at the cleaner's, a representative bought a new suit at 5 o'clock, had it delivered to his apartment at 6, and was able to meet his wife's 7 o'clock train perfectly immaculate . . . Bob McCutcheon is one of the best catch-as-catch can baritones at the Department of Justice.

• • • •

They have a neat way of terminating the White House press conferences . . . When the questioning has gone on long enough, or when there's a slight lull, or when the questions become a little dull or involved, one of the deans among the journalists calls out "Thank you, Mr. President!" and the conference is at an end . . . Not long ago the "Thank you, Mr. President!" rang out as Mr. Roosevelt was in the midst of a long involved answer to a long involved question, and he thanked the thanker.

Sound-Wagon Replaces Band as Prince Georges Saengerbund Frolics

Past President Phillip Ryan leads the chorus of Schnitzelbank and points to the chart, in the style of the old Germans.

Frank Arendas recalls castles overlooking the Rhine and taverns, where song and clinking glasses blend.

Adding a feminine and artistic touch is Miss Anna Smith. She is the spirit of the Prince Georges County Saengerbund, where all is Gemutlichkeit.

Post Staff Photos.

With a Schnitzelbank chart to sing about and 198 gallons of beer to cool them off between stanzas, 300 members of the Saengerbund of Prince Georges County gathered yesterday for its outing on Sligo Creek.

The presence of a shiny red sound-wagon, instead of a brass band, was conclusive proof that the party was but an American version of a German institution. Despite this modern touch, the atmosphere hung heavy with a spirit of Gemutlichkeit which would have compared favorably with any to be found in the Fatherland.

President Cornelius S. Ryan dispensed the beer. Past President Phil Ryan led the Schnitzelbank No leader was necessary when it came to "Du, du liegst mir im Herzen" and "Ich weiss nich was soll es bedeuten."

When the members were not singing, they swam, ate hot dogs and watched the children's foot-races. The opening event of the-all day outing was a softball game between the singers and the Mount Rainier volunteer firemen. Later all joined in a few waltzes on the shore of the creek, with music furnished by the sound-wagon.

As the afternoon wore on and the 12 barrels of beer were emptied one by one, the picnickers forgot the Schnitzelbank chart. Babies dozed in their mothers' arms while their fathers dozed in the shade of the trees.

Even the sound-wagon stopped functioning finally. At last the only sound was the mournful voice of a solitary tenor, crooning gently "Dear Old Pal."

'Baloney' Leads D. C. Robbers' Week-End Loot

Thieves Drink Doctor's Wine; Paper-Hanger Loses Tools.

Thieves, active in the District over the week-end, stole everything from wine and bologna to paper-hangers' equipment. In all 21 robberies were reported to police. Total loot, however, totaled but $390.21.

Frank Van Horn, 56, of the 900 block New York avenue northwest, told police he was attacked from behind by a colored bandit near the Zoo and stabbed with a razor. The thief escaped with $18 he had in his pockets. Van Horn was treated at Emergency Hospital, and his injuries, according to physicians, are not serious.

Robbers broke into the home of Dr. Daniel Borden, police surgeon, in the 2900 block Woodland drive last night, opened numerous cans of food and drank a quantity of imported wine, police were told.

Steal Peanuts, Bologna.

Entering the grocery of Harry Davis, in the 3200 block K street northwest, robbers escaped with salted peanuts, 11 cartons of cigarettes and bologna. The total value was $16.50.

Two fire extinguishers were stolen from a gasoline station operated by Walter Everett, in the 200 block Massachusetts avenue northwest, he told police.

A suitcase containing paper-hanger tools was stolen from the parked automobile of Neal Abelman, of 1624 Eastern avenue northeast. He told police he had parked his car on Seventh street between H and I northwest.

Three unmasked colored men held up Victor Raison, of the 1100 block half street northwest, and robbed him of $14. The robbery occurred on Sixth street near W street.

Face powder, perfume and other cosmetics, together with cash, totaling $3 were stolen from Bessie Wolf, of the 600 block Park road northwest, by a colored bandit at New Hampshire avenue and Webster street northwest, she told police.

A Government check for $59.50 and five $1 bills were snatched from Isabelle R. Lamberg, of the 1200 block Thirteenth street northwest, in the 1100 block Thirteenth street northwest, police learned last night.

Orgenia Martin, colored, of the 2300 hundred block of Georgia avenue, said an unidentified colored robber stole $54 in Postal Savings stamps and $18 in bills when he snatched her pocketbook near her home.

Two armed colored bandits held up Phillip Golden, grocer, of the 1500 block Ninth street northwest, and escaped with $6.

Baltimore Boy Drowns As He Wades in Creek

Elwood Rupert, 17, of Baltimore, Md., was drowned yesterday when he stepped into deep water while wading with friends in Brewers Creek in Ann Arundel County, Md.

Young Rupert had been visiting friends in the country and was to have returned to his home in Baltimore today. Witnesses said Rupert, who could not swim, stepped into deep water and disappeared before rescuers could reach him. A Naval Academy boat assisted in locating the body.

Hope for Armory Brightens As Roosevelt Asks for Funds

President Seeks $210,000 of Congress to Buy Site; 1,100 Militiamen Now Drill in Condemned Hotel, 119 Years Old.

After 35 years of talking about an armory for Washington, the chances of obtaining one seemed somewhat brighter yesterday, after President Roosevelt asked Congress to appropriate $210,000 to buy a site at the end of East Capitol street.

The present building in which 1,100 militiamen drill is a leaky, sagging condemned hotel 119 years old, which, while replete with history and tradition, is not suited to the needs of a modern military organization. It is the National Hotel on Pennsylvania avenue.

Henry Clay died there June 29, 1852. Among its distinguished guests could be mentioned David Davis, John Parker Hale, Owen Lovejoy, Alexander H. Stephens and Thaddeus Stevens. But with the passing of their era, the old hotel [illegible] into decay.

Now its ancient dining rooms and chambers are used by the Capital's National Guard units—at their peril. During a lecture last April a section of the ceiling fell on the audience. Earlier, a ceiling fell in a storeroom, damaging many band instruments paid for by company members.

Commission Created.

As long ago as 1908, Congress passed an act creating an armory commission, instructing it to procure plans and estimates for a suitable armory. They submitted a report calling for a $2,565,000 structure. Ten years later another committee recommending an armory of the same cost to be located where the new Postoffice Building now stands.

In 1926, the District requested the same amount of money for an armory, but it was stricken from appropriations for that year by the Bureau of the Budget. In 1933 the Guard asked for $2,500,000 of the Public Works Administration, but the request was pigeonholed.

Washington's National Guard is the largest in the country without an armory.

The Fifth Battalion, Marine Reserve, commanded by Maj. Harvey L. Miller, numbering close to 600 men, is almost twice as large as any of the 16 reserve battalions in cities throughout the nation. Yet is has no headquarters worthy of the name and is forced to drill in the streets.

Col. John W. Oehmann, commanding officer of the District Guard, said recently he had been trying to "obtain decent facilities for the organization" ever since he joined it in 1899. Oehmann pointed out that this is the only unit in America of which President Roosevelt is commander-in-chief.

Oehmann blames the lack of activity on "red tape and buck passing." The National Hotel has been condemned as unsafe for service. It will undoubtedly be torn down as soon as the National Guard vacates—as the Guard may be compelled to do soon, though it has no place to go.

Senate, House To Confer Soon On Airport Bill

Changes Regarding Road, Farm and Lagoon Will Be Considered.

Conferees from the Senate and House will gather early this week to smooth out final details of the May Copeland bill, providing for increased safety and landing space at the Washington Airport. An early agreement was expected.

The bill passed the Senate Saturday, with several provisions changed since the bill went through the House, and Senators Royal S. Copeland, New York; Bennett Champ Clark, Missouri; Vic Donahey, Ohio; Hiram W. Johnson, California, and Wallace H. White, jr., Maine, will meet with House conferees to put the bill in form satisfactory to both bodies of Congress. The House is expected to name its Representatives today.

Principal changes made in the Senate, which are to be submitted to the House are:

Outright purchase from Arlington County of the section of Military road running through the airport for $25,000, rather than rental of the road for a period of 25 years for the same amount.

Grant of authority to the Secretary of Agriculture to lease 53 acres of the experimental farm, which adjoins the airport, for $1 a year over a period not to exceed 50 years.

Filling in of the lagoon of Boundary Channel, subject to approval of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the project to be carried on under direction of the War Department.

Simmons Quits B. E. P. To Edit Union Papers

George J. Simmons, former president of local No. 1 of the Printing Pressmen and Assistants Union of Washington, has resigned from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, after 19 years of service, to become associate editor of "The Progressive Labor World" and "The Trades' Union News" in Philadelphia, his native city.

7,500 Witness Formal Review Of D. C. Guards

Thousands From Capital and Other Cities Pay Visit to Camp.

By Capt. Ralph S. Walker,
Judge Advocate, District National Guard.

Camp Ritchie, Md., Aug. 15.—While more than 7,500 persons from Washington and other cities watched, the District of Columbia's National Guard passed in formal review this afternoon on the parade ground here.

The camp today was thronged with visiting Washingtonians, calling on relatives and friends in camp.

Mess quarters were strained to find food to feed hundreds of guests, but all were served at the dinner hour in various regimental and company headquarters.

Special Capital Train.

A special train came from Washinkton before noon loaded with hundreds of visitors.

With music by the 121st Engineers Band, led by Warrant Officer Meyer Goldman, the parade began at 5 p. m., and continued for an hour, during which guardsmen executed their military formations in dress uniform, presented arms and marched in formation.

The guard officers, led by Col. John W. Oehmann, commanding officer, formed a short reviewing line in the center of the parade ground and watched the several hundred troopers as they passed. The weather was ideal and the ground was somewhat cooler late in the afternoon after a typically hot summer day.

Automobiles from Washington and other points jammed the roadways around the parade ground and the visitors sat in cars or on the grass to watch the military spectacle that is an annual event of the District Guard's encampment.

Hear Gratifying News.

Officers of the guard were highly pleased today to hear news from Washington that President Roosevelt was backing a move before Congress to secure an appropriation of $210,000 with which to acquire a site for the proposed new armory in the District.

The troops of the 121st Engineers will leave camp early Tuesday morning and make a march of more than 3 miles over somewhat rough country road to a spot on the Maryland-Pennsylvania line, where they will pitch camp in their annual overnight field bivouac.

They will sleep in their pup tents and will participate Tuesday and Wednesday in engineering operations over the countryside and will remain out until after dark Wednesday, when they will march back to camp.

Bad Md. Roads Fault of Others, Tabler Says in Reply to Attack

Criticism Should Have Been Voiced When Assembly Was in Session, Says Highway Head; Blames Democrats for Denying Funds.

Hancock, Md., Aug. 15.—Dr. Homer E. Tabler replied today to Democratic Party critics of State roads maintenance by saying that if they "were vitally interested" they ought to have done something while the Legislature was acting on the roads budget.

Tabler said the position of the State roads commission, which he heads, was that the maintenance of the county roads ought to be returned to the several counties or enough money provided for the State commission to buy equipment necessary to keep them up.

Whereas the commission asked the Legislature for $600,000 to replace obsolete equipment in 1938, it was granted only $175,000, he added.

Speakers at a meeting of Eastern Shore county commissioners at Ocean City yesterday sharply criticized the condition of Maryland roads. Among them were Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore; Rep. T. Alan Goldsborough, Sen. Millard E. Tydings and State Attorney Gen. Herbert R. O'Conor.

In a statement today, Dr. Tabler said:

"Apropos the meeting at Ocean City at which the roads commission was censured for the condition of the county roads, if the records are correct speakers at this meeting are identified with the party that gave the county roads to the State roads commission for maintenance.

"The roads commission has favored the return of the county roads to the several counties. The past General Assembly overwhelmingly rejected this proposal and by statute continued the maintenance of the county roads by the State roads commission, notwithstanding the fact that the roads commission is obligated to maintain these roads with obsolete equipment."

Capt. Birthright Dies at Hospital

Capt. Samuel Freeman Birthright, 69, retired member of the Marine Corps and for 10 years chief clerk in the paymaster's office, died yesterday at the Naval Hospital. He had been ill since June.

Capt. Birthright served in the Marince Corps for more than 25 years, retiring from active duty in 1924. He was a thirty-second degree Mason and a member of the Potomac Lodge. His home was at 726 Highland drive, Woodside Park, Md.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mattie P. Birthright; a son, Parkins Birthright, and a brother, F. B. Birthright, of Washington.

Military and Masonic funeral services will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. in the Fort Myer hapelC, followed by burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Fate of Fidelity Is Near Decision

A decision of shareholders on liquidation or reorganization of the defunct Fidelity Building and Loan Association appeared almost a certainty today as Mrs. Mark C. Bullis, representing a large group of depositors, announced that "decided progress has been made in bringing the differences of the various interested groups together."

Representative of depositors, officials of the office of the Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, will meet tomorrow to discus developments in reorganization plans for the bank.

Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Conner has indicated a final decision is entirely in the hands of depositors. Should a plan of reorganization be adopted, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board would advance the funds for the new bank.

Miracles Form Basis of Film Play at Rialto

Roland Young Is Perfectly Cast in Comedy-Drama by H. G. Wells.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE MAN WHO COULD WORK MIRACLES." London Films picturization, for United Artists release, of the story by H. G. Wells, featuring Roland Young, with Joan Gardner, Ralph Richardson, Ernest Thesiger, Robert Cochran, Lady Tree, Wallace Lupino, Gertrude Musgrove, Edward Chapman, Sophie Stewart, George Zucco and Bruce Winston. Directed by Lothar Mendes. Previewed Wednesday, August 11. At the Rialto.

A comedy-drama of rather more pith than froth has been derived from one of H. G. Wells' imaginative peerings into the future of mankind to form the groundwork and superstructure of this thoroughly entertaining picture.

Unlike the same author's "Things to Come," "The Man Who Could Work Miracles" is predicated upon the thesis that the ineffectual humans occupying this earth should not undertake too quick a short-cut to a social and economic Utopia, which, Mr. Wells estimates, may come about in a million years or so. Too much, power, it seems, is bad for the human race, as exemplified by one of its more humble members.

When the Giver of Power, perched among the stars, decides to experiment with the funny little crawling things that inhabit one of the lesser planets below him, he permits his choice of a subject to exercise a reasonably complete omnipotence in the fashioning of events to be made at random. It falls upon a mild little fellow who is an underling in a small British department store. When this Mr. George McWhirter Fotheringay— and nobody but a small man would have so large-sounding a name—discovers, on a homeward visit to his favorite "pub" for a spot of ale, that he suddenly has become possessed of the power to achieve remarkable things that outlaw every rule of nature, he doesn't know quite what to make of it beyond "cashing in" as an attraction in the music halls. Then he falls under the influence of conflicting social interests who attempt to turn his gift to the furtherance of their own pet philosophies of life and the fattening of their own material resources —a fellow clerk in the draper's shop, then the proprietor, a banker, a cleric, a soldier and so on.

Decides to Run Universe.

Actuated partially by a personal longing for a romance, and in part by the awakening of a slow intelligence to the fact that he is being "used," Mr. Fotheringay decides he will run things on this earth to suit himself. His philosophy of a re-made world turns out to be identical, with slight modifications, with that of the powerful ruling classes he has so bitterly condemned —a totally selfish plan of fulfilling lifelong wishes and an overpowering lust for self-aggrandizement.

This recital of futile hope and utter frustration is cleverly and intelligently worked out in a succession of progressively far-reaching applications of a superhuman power bestowed inexplicably upon a chap not capable of handling it judiciously. Mr. Fotheringay, at first, is content with the materialization of rabbits, making articles of furniture rise and fall at his bidding, removing freckles from a young woman's face and mending a sprained arm for the beauty of the establishment in which he is employed.

Then he realizes the greater potentialities of this strange miracle-working of his and is tempted to eradicate disease from the world, endow everyone with enough wealth for perpetual leisure and otherwise remodel the universe in which we live. It is in these larger undertakings, affecting the welfare of all of humankind that he is not quite up to his job.

While "The Man Who Could Work Miracles" partakes generously of Mr. Wells' penchant for analyzing the present state of civilization, it does so with a fine leavening of humor and a constant reflection of the most conspicuous frailties of human nature. Also, it employs an advanced type of studio craftsmanship that permits all manner of unbelievable things to happen before the very eyes of the audience—such as the instant transplantation of an annoying policeman from a quiet street in England to a traffic-jammed corner in San Francisco and the transformation of a peaceful English garden into a teeming street in Bombay. Great thing, this power —while you've got it!

Young Perfectly Cast.

In the role of George McWhirter Fotheringay, Roland Young has a role perfectly fashioned to his measure. He plays it with even greater sympathetic appeal than the title role in that other slightly occult comedy of "Topper." The all-British cast in support is one of admirable selection, although not largely known on this side. Joan Gardner and Gertrude Musgrove decorate the leading feminine roles with great personal beauty and Ralph Richardson gives an especially effective impersonation of Col. Winstanely, a reactionary of the most virulent sort. The others in the considerable ensemble acquit themselves with full credit and, as has been indicated, the photography is one of the picture's major assets.

As a companion attraction on its new bill, which opened yesterday for a week, the Rialto is presenting "The Throne of the Gods," a pictorial "trip to the top of the world," which is a little impaired in the estimation of these ears by a too verbose and repetitive running commentary by Lowell Thomas. Its photographic effects, however, are grimly and majestically beautiful.

A new issue of the pictured news events of the week is among the supplementary short subjects of a bill that boasts an interesting and "different" feature.

Little

In line with the apparent rule that public demand will not permit the withdrawal of any film play in which Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy are costarred at the Little Theater, "Rose Marie" is being held a second week at the bandbox Ninth street house.

This romantic musical drama of the opera star and the handsome member of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, with its rugged outdoor settings and effective blending of music and action, is such as to warrant this public enthusiasm in any man's theater. The tuneful Friml score is done full justice and the dramatic periods of the play are in no way slighted.

It is interesting to note that Allan Jones appears briefly in this subject in an operatic aria or two with Miss MacDonald. He was thought to have been slighted at the time of the film's original release in favor of its feminine costar. That matter has since been adjusted by the casting of Mr. Jones himself as costar with Miss MacDonald in "The Firefly."

The bill at the Little is completed by short-reel screen features and news events.

Tragedy Struck the Theater Two Years Ago Today In the Alaska Plane Crash Death of Will Rogers

BELL.

WHILE Washington playgoers are contemplating the financial debacle precipitated by Jim Fisk's attempted corner of the gold market and its resultant "Black Friday" on New York's Wall Street shortly after the War Between the States, as depicted on the screen in "The Toast of New York," or the collapse of his miracle-made world about the head of little Mr. George McWhirter Fotheringay, in "The Man Who Could Work Miracles," they are apt to overlook the fact that it was two years ago today that a closer and more poignant tragedy overtook the American theater.

It was on August 16, 1935, that news that stunned the world—"Will Rogers and Wiley Post killed in plane crash"—was flashed by the Associated Press from isolated and lonely Point Barrow, Alaska.

News of the death of Will Rogers, whose flight "log" since the beginning of the ill-fated trip had appeared in his daily newspaper paragraphs, was too incredible for many to believe. Newspaper offices were besieged with calls. Flags on many public buildings were flown at half-staff and men and women who had read Rogers and seen him on both the stage and screen, and felt somehow that they knew him, paused in their work to discuss the almost unbelievable passing of a man who had become so much a part of the American scene.

The former cowboy from Oklahoma, who rose from the obscure status of "an entertainer with a horse" to one of the world's highest paid and most beloved motion picture stars, attained fame also as a writer and lecturer with his homely wit and philosophical reflections. The climb to eminence was neither an easy nor a short one. When this reporter first saw Rogers on the stage of a vaudeville theater he was only a lariat thrower whose verbal contributions to his turn were few and far between. Gradually he expanded the vocal portion of his act and, in time, was persuaded to abandon the horse and become an articulate and unique addition to the variety stage's considerable list of distinctive specialists. His advancemnet to the first rank of American entertainers was more rapid from that time forth.

It was necessary, as a matter of fact, to hear Will Rogers in order to comprehend the full measure of the man's grasp of world affairs, American politics and the requirements of effective comedy. That is why he never was the success in silent pictures that he later proved when the screen became audible. There was a pungency, leavened by sound common sense and the outgrowth of straight thinking in Rogers' work that never quite could be apprehended by the silent cinema, even with its lengthy subtitles printed upon the screen—many of which Rogers himself wrote. With the "talkies," however, his star soared.

Foremost among the Rogers' attributes that struck a responsive chord in public fancy was the unostentatious bearing of the man. The blue serge suit and black bow tie became the trademark of this genius of penetrating wit, even in the most stiffly starched and heavily ermined of assemblages.

It was the hallmark of a man whose place has not been filled in the American theater and never will be in view of this generation. Two years have not served to dim the memory of so great a personality—nor will two decades, or any other temporal measure of mankind's pleasantest recollections in the playhouse.

Speaking of "The Man Who Could Work Miracles," as we were somewhere back there, it is interesting to note that one of the most important roles in support of Roland Young is played on the Rialto screen by an English actor not unknown to Capital audiences "in the flesh." Those who take their theatergoing seriously will recognize in Ralph Richardson, the Col. Winstanely of "Miracles," the able and versatile actor who appeared as Mercutio on the stage of the National Theater in Katharine Cornell's production of "Romeo and Juliet," in which Maurice Evans was the Romeo. Mr. Richardson since has been seen on the local screen in "Java Head," "Things to Come" and other notable films.

"Artists and Models," the star-studded musical comedy which opens Friday on the Earle screen, is only the first of a number of outstanding Paramount pictures which the Earle and Metropolitan theaters will present during the 1937-1938 season.

Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner Brothers' interests in the Washington territory, made known over the week-end that, as heretofore, 50 per cent of the studio output of this major company will be available for first-run engagements in the Warner Brothers downtown amusement centers.

"Souls at Sea," starring Gary Cooper and George Raft, with Frances Dee, Henry Wilcoxon and Olympe Bradna in support, is another Paramount release soon to be seen at the Earle. Based on a novel theme, this feature was co-produced by Director Henry Hathaway and Writer Grover Jones, who collaborated in "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" and "Trail of the Lonesome Pine."

Marlene Dietrich's new production, directed by Ernst Lubitsch, likewise a Warner prospect, features two popular leading men—Herbert Marshall and Melvyn Douglas—and a favorite comedian in Edward Everett Horton.

These three features, which are already completed, will be followed by other outstanding Paramount releases. This company, incidentally, has announced that it will make 22 special pictures costing approximately $1,000,000 each during the year, in addition to its regular program schedule. Such important players as Fredric March, Bing Crosby, Claudette Colbert, Jack Benny, W. C. Fields, Mae West, Carole Lombard, Sylvia Sidney, Fred MacMurray and Edward Arnold are among the stars who will be prominently featured."

Communications Department.

Before departing for the wild jungle country of Potomac Park in quest of a little fresh air and the ferocious man-eating mosquito, this column wishes to take occasion gratefully to acknowledge valued communications from Gene Ford, Charles Kurtzman, Bess Davis Schreiner, Lou Brown, recently promoted from the Loew publicity department in Baltimore to the home offices in New York, and Col. Jimmy Lake, of the Gayety. All of these warming messages are couched in terms a little more generous than this department deserves.

And that reminds me. Not unmindful of his manifold services to Washington's "show world" during his incumbency of the resident managership of Loew's Capitol Theater, the Variety Club of Washington, the Capital's foremost organization of showmen, on Monday night, August 30, will tender Gene Ford a farewell testimonial at the Willard Hotel.

It is expected that this tribute to the able executive who has just been elevated to higher responsibilities in New York will be attended by leaders in the official and social life of the National Capital as well as theater executives from Richmond, Baltimore, Norfolk, Philadelphia and New York, many of whom already have signified their intention of being present.

The committee in charge of the affair is under the joint chairmanship of Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's, and Harry E. Lohmeyer, Warner Brothers division manager in Washington.

Sidney Lehman, raconteur of note and erstwhile member of the United Artists Washington sales force, prior to his appointment to the managership of that company's Buffalo branch film exchange, is wiring his friends in town that his charming wife, Helen—she of the infectious laugh—has just presented him with 10 pounds and 11 ounces of male heir. Congratulations is what we always say.

Is Wizard of the Steel Blades

Sonja Henie's championship form as the world's foremost exponent of the graceful art of figure-skating already has been demonstrated to followers of the screen. It will be revealed again in "Thin Ice," latest of the Twentieth Century-Fox musical productions, in which she is costarred with Tyrone Power. This unique subject will be coming along to a Capital screen in the near future.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Aug. 15.—Idol chatter: Lionel Barrymore always calls his brother John "The Kid"—wonder what Elaine called him when they had their little spats. Cited for the Hollywood Croix de Merite: Gene Autrey—offered $5,000 to indorse a cigarette, he astounded Hollywood by refusing because he doesn't smoke! May Robson is the only great-grandmother in pictures and she is "younger" than some of our bored-with-it-all ingenues.

LIONEL BARRYMORE.

Note: Hobart Bosworth would appreciate any old ship models you have in the attic. No one can accuse the chorines in Warner Brothers filmusical of being "without visible means of support."

Amazing how many women consider Leslie Howard the great male heart-throb of the screen. Look alikes: Carole Lombard and Marlene Dietrich—in profile. Francis Lederer is such a physical culture crank that he never goes on a week-end party without a trunk full of gymnasium apparatus. Sonja Henie looks as cherubic as a Patsy doll—but the producers at Twentieth Century tremble when she loses her temper. The real owner of Hollywood's newest antique shop is Eddie Cantor.

An ancient, but unrepealed Los Angeles statute makes it illegal to herd more than 50 cows, mules or horses through the city streets. Hollywood's hobby horseman: Wallace Beery—who cannot be so tough for he spends his leisure making color photos of flowers. Wonder why Lily Pons insists that her parents were wealthy; Americans would like her more if they know the truth about her early struggles.

One of the best shows in Hollywood is staged every other day or so in the Brown Derby. At high noon Robert Taylor enters, a vision of what-the-well-dressed-young-man-will-wear-this-season. Preceded by an obsequious head-waiter, he strides purposefully to a table in the rear of the room. A reverent hush falls over the place, necks crane and all eyes focus upon the unsmiling countenance of America's No. 1 idol, who glances neither to the right nor to the left during the regal promenade. Sitting down in solitary splendor, Mr. Taylor orders a telephone and a lunch. And for 45 minutes thereafter, he eats with one hand and nurses that French telephone with the other, while his admiring audience whispers its guesses about the identity of the party on the other end of the line. His lunch finished, Mr. Taylor exists with eyes sternly fixed ahead—and the Brown Derby returns to its noisy normalcy.

No Wall Street baron could play a "big business man" better.

Talked with John Beal who is just back from a flying trip to Chicago, the national headquarters of the John Beal Fan Club. And such attentions as he received! A florist member of the club kept his hotel room filled with free bouquets; a radio-shop owner lived up to his membership by donating the use of a set, and a Beal-er who drives his own taxi offered free transportation.

"I was deeply grateful for all of those kindnesses," John told me, "but I began to get apprehensive when a fourth member of the club called on me and introduced himself as an apprentice mortician!"

Glancing over a four-year-old fan magazine last night (hope this is not becoming a habit), I made a list of the girls for whom stardom was confidently predicted: Lillian Harvey, Florine McKinney, June Knight, Charlotte Henry, Dorothy Wilson, Mimi Jordan, Verna Hillie, Kathleen Burke, Lillian Bond. According to that magazine, each one would rival Garbo within the year. And I am wondering how many people in Hollywood know the present whereabouts of those girls. And how many of those girls—and the others like them—had their lives embittered by a too-brief taste of fame.

On almost any boulevard between Hollywood and Beverly Hills, you see men offering their services as guides to the homes of movie stars. I've always been puzzled to know how they keep track of celebrities who move so frequently that even their intimates cannot locate them. So, this morning, I paid a guide to take me on the grand tour. Pointing to a mansion which belongs to a certain banker I know, he gravely informed me that, "Joan Crawford lives there." "Stop a minute" I commanded. "I'll go in and try to get her autograph." But my "guide" stepped on the gas. "No, I wouldn't dare let you do that," he explained. "She keeps the most vicious dogs in Hollywood!"

New Fall Fashions Distracting to Men

The new fashion trend, as seen by Hollywood and Marlene Dietrich, is one which will endeavor to attract the attention of the masculine contingent. In "Angel," her new Paramount film, Miss Dietrich wears a particularly alluring costume to the races. Black chffon is chosen for her long, flowing afternoon gown and her hat is a broad-brimmed model flanked by two huge flowers of pale pink. It is the sort of hat definitely designed by Travis Banton to take the masculine mind off the horses.

Garden Creation Scores Victory

For a midsummer wedding out of doors, Mary Carlisle, Paramount player now in "Double or Nothing," with Bing Crosby, recently chose an ideal costume. A billowing skirt of sheer, pale blue organza, striped in matching satin proved an excellent foil for a crisp slip of blue taffeta worn underneath. The bodice of Miss Carlisle's frock was fitted and accentuated by bands of pink velvet ribbon with a corsage of forget-me-nots at the center. With a huge hat of natural colored horsehair banded in pink velvet, this costume out-shone even the bride.

Former Hollywood Film Player Enjoys Wonders of World Tour

It was at the end of 1935 that Percy Marmont finished his part in Alfred Hitchcock's "Secret Agent," in England. Now he is back as Nova Pilbeam's father in Hitch's new thriller, "The Girl Was Young," in production at Pinewood.

Marmont has had an interesting world tour in the intervening year. Starting from London in a fog, he went to South Africa, where he headed the first Technicolor unit ever to penetrate the not-now-so-dark continent. Once his agent arranged for him to film a native dance, agreeing to pay the chief $30 for his permission, Marmont arrived at the village, filmed the dance and tendered the six notes. The chief counted them and handed one back. "We danced only $25 worth," he said. "Just a little unlike the film business," thought Marmont, and with the odd note bought up a whole stock of candy which he handed out to the native children.

From Africa he went to Madagascar and India where he was entertained by the Maharajah of Baroda in his palace; then down to the Malay States and the Dutch East Indies, where he saw performed a native dance not seen by any other living white man.

"It wasn't a put-up show for the tourists," he said. "We went 200 miles up country, and though it was worth it I was jolly glad to get back to the ship and a good old fox trot."

From Indo-China to China proper. Of Shanghai, Marmont says "tough;" of Peking "beautiful;" and of the "forbidden city" he relates the following. He and a friend were being conducted around a great museum by a Chinese guide who, after pointing out many interesting exhibits, approached a beautiful tapestry screen saying "Vellee beautiful, imperial dragon on it." Marmont happened to know that an imperial dragon has five claws, and mentioned that this one only had four. "Oh, no," said the imperturbable Chinaman, "one, two, three, five, allee right."

Crossing the China Sea, Marmont's ship collided with a Chinese freighter and had to put back to a small port for repairs. Marmont filled in the time walking around the town and found that the only cinema house it boasted was showing "Rich and Strange," a film he made for Hitchcock in 1931.

In Japan he went into a shop to buy some handkerchiefs. An English-speaking assistant took his order, but disappeared at the insistent beckoning of an ancient Japanese who kept peering furtively at Marmont. The assistant returned and said that his "guvnor" had recognized him and would he dine with them that evening. Marmont accepted and had his first real Japanese meal.

Then, on his way to Hollywood, a few days in Honolulu—only a few because he found it "changed from a beautiful island to a city of beautiful concrete!"

In Hollywood he met many old friends. William Powell, Ronald Colman, Herbert Marshall, Eric Blore and Gloria Swanson threw a party for him. "We had a grand get-together," he said. "I hadn't seen many of them for over five years."

Then, home to England! "And," says Marmont, "the greatest thrill of all was that it wasn't raining when we docked!"

Prop Guns Get Band Into a Jam

A left-handed compliment to Hollywood's realism threatened to postpone 20th Century-Fox's expedition into the heart of Africa, where Mrs. Martin Johnson and Director Otto Brower are heading a troupe to film scenes for the picture "Stanley and Livingstone."

A cable from Nairobi, Kenya Colony, revealed that local officials had solemnly impounded studio prop guns and blank cartridges with the explanation that they looked too deadly and dangerous. After explanations were made, officials set about helping the company in every way possible.

Radio Contract.

Paramount studio was able to keep in constant contact with all phases of the filming of "Ebb Tide" during location work on the technicolor sea picture on and around Catalina Island. Short-wave radio made possible continuous communication between studio executives, Director James Hogan, and his assistants.

Edgar Smith Allows Foe Only 7 Hits

Wally Moses Drives Out 4-Ply Clout; DiMaggio Has Bad Day.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 15.—With hard luck Edgar Smith pitching seven-hit ball to score his first victory of the season, the Athletics defeated the New York Yankees again today, 5 to 4, to sweep their three-game series.

The year's second-largest crowd in Shibe Park, 32,346 paid, saw the blond left-hander from Williamsport finally break his season-long jinx at the expense of the league leaders, who Philadelphia had beaten only once this year before this series started.

Smith held the slugging Yank hitless in all but the fourth for one run and four in the fifth for two. Previously a hit batter and an error had admitted another run.

Red Ruffing also pitched a seven-hitter but one of the blows was Wally Moses' nineteenth home run of the season and another was a triple by Moses setting up another tally. Moses also got a single.

The three other Philadelphia runs were donated by Joe DiMaggio, who had one of his rare bad days afield. His wild throw in the second inning let in one run and set up another. His muff of an easy fly in the third sent another home.

Di Maggio had better luck at bat, collecting two hits, as did Bill Dickey and Jake Powell, the latter driving in half the Yankees' markers.

Ballard Wins Soap Box Derby in Akron

Akron, Ohio, Aug. 15 (AP).—While a crowd estimated by police at 130,000 cheered lustily, 12-year-old Robert Ballard, of White Plains, N. Y., won the fourth annual all-American soap box derby here today.

In the final race of a thrilling 5-hour program, young Ballard rolled down the 1,175-foot concrete course in his home-made gravity-powered automobile to capture the national championship, a 4-year scholarship to any State college or university, a silver trophy and a diamond-set gold medal.

Second place went to Kenneth Richardson, 12, of Detroit. John Sigmans, 12, of Bethlehem, Pa., was third.

Sports in Brief

GRID COACH RESIGNS.

Ames, Iowa, Aug. 15 (AP).—Joseph L. Truskowski, former University of Michigan star athlete, resigned from the Iowa State College coaching staff today to accept a coaching offer from Wayne University at Detroit.

JACK MALOY WINS.

Denver.—Jack Maloy, of Tulsa, former Princeton golf ace, defeated his brother, Pat, 3 and 1, in 36 holes today to win the Rocky Mountain amateur tournament.

YACHTS RACE AGAIN.

New London, Conn.—Victorious and vanquished sloops of the recent America's Cup yacht races and trials will converge here tomorrow to open a week's cruise that for the first time will see all five British and American cup yachts in one race.

SIMMS MEETS WALKER.

San Francisco.—Eddie Simms, hard-hitting Cleveland welterweight, and "Sonny Boy" Walker, a favorite with local fans, will clash in a ten-round bout here tomorrow night.

BLUE HEN WINS.

Lewes, Del.—In the allowance class of 11 entries competing today for the Henlopen Trophy in the Lewes Yacht Club races, Blue Hen II, 28-foot sloop, came in victor for the third time this season, while The Sue, owned by H. W. Knowles, of Angola, Del., also chalked up her third victory in the snipe class.

POLO TEAMS WIN.

New York.—Argentina's invading San Jose team and Jock Whitney's Greentree Four, the 1936 champion, turned in impressive performances today. The Argentines whipped a pick-up Delray team, 14 to 2, at the Meadow Brook Club. Greentree turned back the Akanusti quartet, 6 to 3, at Sands Point.

BOXING TITLE "VACANT."

Paris.—The International Boxing Union announced today it considered the world heavyweight boxing title vacant because Jim Braddock failed to keep his contract to fight Max Schmeling.

"GREEN" JOCKEYS HIT.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y.—The racing commissioners of 22 States discussed tonight a proposed plan to abolish "green" or inexperienced riders from the country's tracks.

Preliminary to tomorrow's opening session of the annual convention of the National Association of State Racing Commissioners, delegates discussed a suggestion that jockeys be required to serve as "contract" exercise boys for a year before riding in any race.

WEINSTOCK NET WINNER.

Bolton Landing, N. Y.—Robert Weinstock, of St. Louis, Mo., today won the men's singles in the annual Sagamore Tennis Tournament with a 6—2, 6—1, 6—4 victory over Paul Martin, of Troy, N. Y.

AUSTIN CLAPP WEDS.

Alexandria Crew Beats Local Quad

Old Dominion Defeats Potomac First Time in 4 Years.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Aug. 15.—Including among their achievements the establishment of a new record for the quadruple sculls over the George Washington Memorial Course, Old Dominion Boat Club oarsmen scored their first victory over the Potomac Boat Club in four years here this afternoon, when they copped two out of the three races staged between the two clubs, as the main features of the local club's fifty-seventh annual regatta.

Their oars flashing in perfect unison, the Old Dominion quad sped over the half-mile course in the fast time of two minutes and 55 seconds, to better the old mark of 2:59, established by the Potomac crew in the annual race in 1924. The locals' victory in this event assured them of a win in the regatta, for they had previously nosed out the Potomacs in the four-oared gig race by a margin of less than a length.

Potomac Wins.

The Potomac oarsmen partially vindicated themselves by winning the race between the eight-oared shells—regarded as the most important event of the day. Composed of Paul Lanagan, Dewey Dinsman, Bob Duncan, Ernie Miller, Bill Stewart, Rudy Kaufman, Jim Henderson, Granville Gude, and Jerry Lawler, the Potomac eight covered the course in the exceptionally fast time of 4:20, to win by three lengths.

In the Potomac River Sailing Association races, staged as an added feature of the regatta, Bill Diehl's Signet copped honors in the Comet division, while George Dankers' Sink Quick, a home-made boat, won out in the free for all.

Old Dominion entries received their share of the awards in the sailing events, Bob Cochran's Meli taking third place in the Comet division, while boats owned by George Lindsey and Brent Drane finished second and third, respectively, in the open class.

Events Postponed.

A series of intra-club canoe events, included on the original schedule, were postponed, and will probably be held at the club next Sunday.

Other regatta results follow:

Race for dories and gilling skiffs,—won by Dave Corsa, Old Dominion; second, Avis Boothe, Old Dominion.

Outboard motorboats—Won by Paul Offutt's Gertie, National Outboard Association; second, Crampton's Float, Washington, unattached. (Only entries).

Sailing Canoes—Won by Al Jacobson's Skeeter; second, Bernie Berkow's Palace.

Cabin cruisers—Won by Bill Coakley's Beau King; second, Clarence Simpson's Jean III.

Middleburg Polo Team Beats War Department

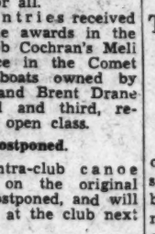
White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Aug. 15 (AP).—The Middleburg Polo Team defeated the War Department outfit, 7 to 4, on the Greenbrier Polo Club Field today.

Paul Dunleavy Wins.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 15.—Paul Dunleavy, of Annapolis, took first easily today in the mile and a half race sponsored by the South River Beach Club.

Sports Postscripts

Turning back the pages of The Post, this column, which every 30 days digs through dust-hidden volumes to find out what was a doin' 10 years ago to the month, offers these historical sports facts that transpired during August, 1927. Time marches backward—



JOHNSON.

WALTER JOHNSON was honored on the second of the month after 20 years as a Washington pitcher . . . he was near tears several times during the celebration, so touched was the BIG TRAIN . . . he was touched again later in the afternoon . . . when the Detroit Tigers, who had beaten him in his big league debut, knocked him out of the box in the ninth inning to win, 5-4. . . . PAUL BERLENBACH, former light heavyweight champion, was declared to be "washed up" as a fighter by his manager, DAN HICKEY . . . who told the New York Boxing Commission that BERLENBACH was through . . . on the tenth, BABE RUTH hit the only home run in the majors . . . he did against the Nats to defeat them, 4-3 . . . EARL CLARK played his last game for the Richmond Colts of the Piedmont League on the twelfth . . . the local boy was sold to the BOSTON (now BEES) BRAVES for $15,000 . . .

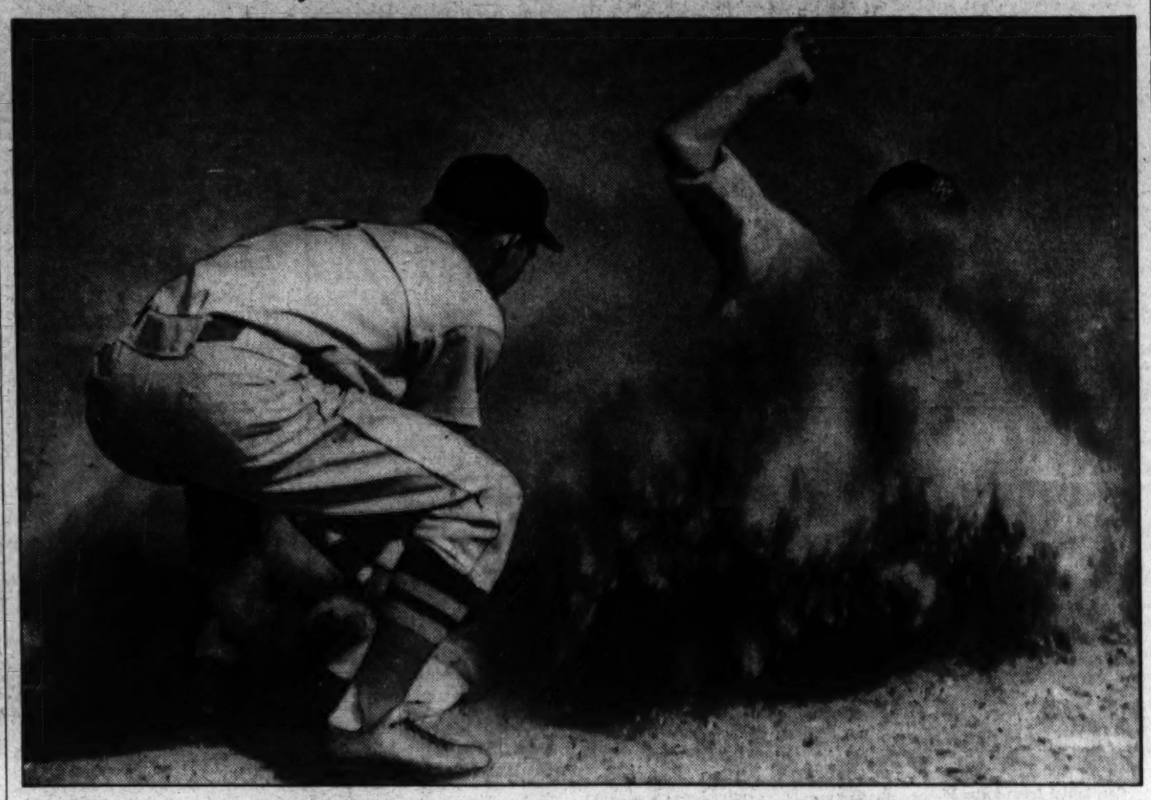
BOB CONSIDINE, who later became some shucks as a tennis writer, was defeated in the finals of the National Public Parks Tournament in Detroit . . . by EDDIE JACOBS, Baltimore entry . . . your friend, ALOYSIUS HARRY SIMMONS, was leading the American League in batting with a potent .393 average . . . the general contracting business was so bountiful that there was expressed doubt in the mind of URT COGGINS, Central High basketball coach, as to whether or not he would leave it to return to his coaching job . . . he did, however . . . a triple play, the only one of the month, was started by BUDDY MYER, Boston Red Sox' shortstop, on the twentieth . . . the writing boys had begun calling JOE McCARTHY, Cubs' manager, the "second miracle man" . . . but remember what the YANKS did to his CUBS in the World Series? . . . 4 straight . . .

* * *

ROBERT TYRE JONES, who chased golf balls around the country's best courses under the name of BOBBY, won the National Amateur for the third time on the twenty-eighth . . . he defeated CHICK EVANS, 8 up and 7 to play . . . all this time your NATS had been losing 12 straight games . . . and BUCKY HARRIS had been trying everything imaginable to end the slump . . . finally, in his dispair, he put the names of the players in a hat and ordered them to draw lots . . . to see who would play the thirteenth day . . . it rained . . . the team returned home the next day . . . and several of the baseball writers, who had deserted the club in the midst of its losing treak, met the train . . . one asked BUCKY what the trouble was . . . BUCKY shrugged his sholders and philosophically reminded the scribe . . . "You can't win 'em all" . . .

BOB GARRISON.

Myer, in Cloud of Dust, Is Put Out Twice.



In the sixth inning of the first game yesterday, Capt. "Buddy" Myer attempted to steal third. DeSautels threw to "Pinky" Higgins who made a blind stab in the swirling dust. The umpire, Mr. Cal Hubbard, ruled Buddy out. Irked, Capt. Myer scooped up two handsful of dust and threw a miniature dust storm in the general direction of the ump. Whereupon the Nats' captain was really out—for the rest of the day. A shower of pop bottles but no orchids were then thrown on the field—with no casualties. The photo proves the fans wrong.

Giants Beat Phillies, 5-3, For 3d Win

Two 9th-Inning Homers Spoil Shutout for Clyde Castleman.

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—A couple of ninth-inning homers ruined a shutout for Clyde Castleman today, but they didn't stop the young right-hander from pitching the Giants to a 5-to-3 victory over the Phillies, for their third straight win.

The homer-hitters were Johnny Moore and Dolph Camilli. Moore's came with one aboard, after Castleman had blanked the Phils with six hits through the first eight innings, and had two out in the ninth. He got Pinky Whitney for the third out, however, to end the threat.

Cubs Lose 2 to Reds; Lead Cut to 4 Games

Cincinnati Crew Outslugs League Pacemakers to Take Both Ends of Double Bill and Win Series; Homers Plentiful.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—The Chicago Cubs' National League lead was cut to four games today—its lowest in more than two weeks when Cincinnati outslugged the Chicagoans to take both ends of a double-header before 31,155. A 16-hit attack against three Cub hurlers gave the Reds the opener, 13 to 6, and Alex Kampouris, seventeenth homer settled the nightcap, 9 to 8.

The twin triumphs—only the second time in 13 double-headers that the Cubs were vanquished twice this year—gave the Reds the series, three games to one, ran Charlie Grimm's team's slump to eight defeats in 14 games, and hacked a game and one-half off their lead over the second-place Giants, who beat Philadelphia, 5 to 3, today.

Picking up where they left off in yesterday's 17-hit, 10-to-5 victory, the Reds pounded out 24 hits, including five homers today. With Hub Walker dispatching a homer and three singles and George Davis a homer, double and single, they routed Tex Carlton in the fourth inning of the opener after the Cubs has a 5-1 lead off Lefty Grissom and then went on to hang the defeat on Clyde Shoun with three runs in the seventh. As a clincher, they added six runs off Charley Root in the last two frames.

With the Cub infield making three errors, the Reds ran young Clay Bryant off the mound before he could retire a batter and then finished up against Curt Davis for a 5-0 first inning lead. After picking up a run in the first, the Cubs, however, pounded Gene Schott and Grissom for five runs and a 6-5 lead in the second. After Riggs' homer tied the score, Billy Herman's fumble, his third and the Cubs' sixth error of the day, gave the Reds another run in the fourth before Riggs' second homer made it 8-6. Bath homers were off Curt Davis.

Ken O'Dea's homer off R. Davis, after Lonny Frey doubled in the seventh, tied it up for the Cubs in the seventh, only to have Kampouris' homer off Parmelee untie it again and hand the Cubs their first three-game losing streak since June 27.

Wes Ferrell Trims Lefty Grove in Duel

Mel Almada Hit Circuit Clout to Score Mate in Opening Contest; Weaver Outpitches McKain in Nightcap.

By Shirley Povich.

Using the same formula in both games—a blend of fine pitching and old-fashioned slugging—the surprising Nats emerged from 5½ hours of baseball yesterday with a double victory over the Boston Red Sox and fifth place in the American League standing.

They slapped down the Boston club and Lefty Grove in the first game, 8 to 3, and then beat the Red Sox all over again in the second battle, 9 to 3, to send 22,000 fans away from Griffith Stadium with a new respect for the Washington Club.

That opening victory represented the seventh straight triumph of the ramping Nats and that second game upped to eight straight their string of successes—the most prolonged winning streak for a Washington club since those happy days of 1933.

They barged ahead of the Cleveland Indians in the American League race when the Indians obligingly dropped a double-header to the White Sox in Cleveland. The Nats took over fifth place by a half game margin.

The 22,000 who sat in on the first Sabbath twin-bill of the season, also sat in on the regular weekly bottle-throwing episode which held up play for five minutes and placed two overzealous fans temporarily in the hands of the gendarmes.

Buddy Myer squawked so long and loud at Umpire Hubbard's decision calling him out in an attempted steal of third base in the sixth inning of the first game that Hubbard thumbed him out of the ball game. But not before Myer grabbed two fistfuls of diamond dust and heaved 'em all over Hubbard's nice clean uniform.

Pop Bottles Hurled.

The fans in the third base boxes were deeply exercised by it all and approximately ten pop bottles came hurling out of the stands. The closest Hubbard came to being hit was when a bottle skimmed past his ear and ended up against the foot of Buddy Lewis, who had taken up his position at third base.

One lone policeman bobbed up in the vicinity of the bottle-pitching fans and spotted two guys who looked like culprits. He escorted them out of the park, but no arrests was recorded at the nearby precinct station.

Myer was forced to remain out of uniform in the second game and probably faces a fine for what Hubbard may call inciting a riot in his report to League President Harridge.

That first game was a notable affair, if for no other reason than it brought forth Wes Ferrell's first conquest of Lefty Grove in a pitching battle since Ferrell came into the American League ten years ago. Never before had the loose-jointed right-hander been able to beat the league's leading southpaw, but yesterday Grove dipped his colors to Ferrell in decisive defeat.

Grove retired at the end of the seventh inning with the Red Sox hopelessly beaten, and Ferrell went the route to hold Boston to nine hits and shut 'em out in every inning but the fourth, when the Sox temporarily tied the score at 3 to 3.

Nats Pound McKain.

Manager Joe Cronin sent out another southpaw in that second game and Monte Weaver, in a come-back attempt, ushered the Nats to victory with an eight hit performance while his pals were pounding Young Archie McKain for 12 hits.

The upshot of it all was that Cronin's Red Sox descended from third place in the League standings to fourth. They were winless in the four-game series here.

Mel Almada, who was swinging a vengeful bat, didn't help the Red Sox any in that first game when he interrupted one of Grove's pitches in the third inning and thumped it over the rightfield wall with a man on base.

Washington got a gift run from the Red Sox in the first inning of the opener after Johnny Stone lashed a long triple to rightcenter. He languished on base while Grove struck out Kuhel and was trapped between third and the plate when Grove fielded Milhalic's tap back to the box. Stone was tagged, too, but Third Baseman Frank Higgins then went and dropped the ball and before he could recover it, Stone was home.

Wes Ferrell, himself signaled the start of the next assault on Grove in the third inning when he bashed a single to left. Then it was that young Almada, a former Boston employe, swatted his line-drive homer over the rightfield wall to up Ferrell's lead to 3-0.

The Red Sox who had only one hit to show for their first three innings against Ferrell, got right back into the ball game in the fourth with a four hit barrage that tied the score. Before anybody was out, Joe Cronin and Jimmy Foxx singled to left, Frankie Higgins doubled to right to score 'em both, and McNair dropped a single at Sington's feet to score Higgins and deadlock the game at 3-3.

It was a shaky session for Ferrell and there was anxious looks toward the bull pen where a couple of pitchers were warming up, but Ferrell reformed suddenly. He gave the Red Sox only four hits during those last five innings and only one runner advanced as far as third.

Nats Fall on Grove.

And then as if in appreciation for the way Ferrell was holding 'em, the Nats busied themselves with Grove in the seventh and knocked him loose from four runs to break the 3-3 tie.

The pesky Almada started it all with a superb bunt that he beat out with ease and then the Nats got a break on Lewis' grounder that took a bad hop and was muffed by Joe Cronin. Cecil Travis, hitless until that point, blazed a brisk single to center and a run was home.

Travis went to second when Cramer's throw struck Lewis, as that fellow was racing into third and thus both were in a position to score if Stone made a hit. He did. He thumped a single past McNair to right field, and two more runs were home. With two out, Johnny Mihalic dropped a double into right center and Stone was home. It was 7-3 in favor of the Nats and just for the fun of it, Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis drove home another run in the eighth off Al Thomas.

Bosox Take Lead.

Boston was first off the mark in that second game. Cramer pounding a triple to right center in the first inning and bringing home a run when Cronin pushed a safe bunt past Monte Weaver.

That 1-0 state of affairs endured until the third when the Almada fellow, with what must have been fiendish delight, put the tying run on base with a single to right. Buddy Lewis pushed him to third with a single to center and Travis brought him home with a long fly to Cramer.

Four of the eight hits he allowed, Monte Weaver yielded in the first two innings, but then he settled down to a string of three hitless innings and the Nats awarded him in the fifth with a vicious six-run uprising against the left-handed Mr. McKain.

It started off tamely enough. Rick Ferrell singled to center and Monte Weaver sacrificed him to second. But before Rube Walberg finally came in and relieved the swooning Mr. McKain, the Nats had four of their six runs across the plate.

The Almada fellow breathed new life into the uprising after Weaver's sacrifice by beating out a single to Cronin and Buddy Lewis drew a walk to fill the bases. Cecil Travis bounced a high grounder over Jimmy Foxx's head for a freakish double and two runs were home. Johnny Stone slammed a single to right and two more were home. The Nats were scoring in pairs throughout the inning. Walberg relieved McKain after Stone's blow and Kuhel tagged him for a single. Eventually, Freddie Sington doubled to right center to score the fifth and sixth runs of the inning.

The Nats added a pair of superfluous runs off Walberg in the ninth when Rick Ferrell, Weaver, Almada and Lewis bashed out consecutive singles but the only threat the Sox produced was in the seventh when they came up with two runs to cut

Bobby Riggs Beats Parker for the Eastern Grass Court Tennis Title

Sensational Youth Takes Third Crown

Mrs. Fabyan, Alice Marble Take Women's Doubles Title.

By the United Press.

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Robert L. Riggs, 19-year-old California sensation, scored his third major tennis victory in as many weeks today when he won the Eastern Grass Court singles championship.

The West Coast star conquered Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J., American Davis Cupper and second-ranking player in the Nation, 6—3, 7—5, 7—5. Riggs' triumph followed his previous conquests at Seabright and Southampton.

The women's doubles title went to Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Cambridge, Mass., and Alice Marble, national singles champion from Los Angeles. They took a 9—7, 6—1 victory in the finals against Caroline Babcock, Los Angeles, and Mrs. John Van Ryn, Austin, Tex. By winning, Mrs. Fabyan and Miss Marble were virtually assured of the No. 1 doubles assignment against England in the Wightman Cup matches next week.

Don Budge, of Oakland, Calif., and Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, world's doubles champions, won the Eastern title after a fierce 2—6, 8—6, 6—2, 3—6, 6—3 struggle with Parker and Frank Shields, Hollywood movie player.

There was little doubt about the outcome of the singles final after Riggs had taken the first set, 6—3. Parker went out into early leads in each set, but failed to hold them in the face of Riggs' superior shot-making and court coverage.

In the first set when Parker would not take the initiative, Riggs bore down with forcing shots into the base line corners, and followed through with swift and effective sallies up to the net. Down 40-love in the final game, Riggs ran five successive points to win.

Trailing 5—3 in the second set, Parker won his own service and then broke through Riggs to tie the count. Riggs retaliated by breaking through the top-seeded player in the next game and concluded by winning the twelfth game for the second set.

Again down 5—3 in the third, Parker fought off Riggs, tying the count at five-all after Riggs had been within two points of winning the match in the ninth game. At five-all, Riggs broke through and won the next two games for the match. Four services aces were registered during the entire match and they all came off the racquet of the Californian in the third set.

Ambers' Pilot Bids $35,000 For Tom Farr

By the United Press.

Long Branch, N. J., Aug. 15.—Al Weill, manager of Lightweight Champion Lou Ambers, tried to purchase Tommy Farr's managerial contract today for $35,000.

The surprise offer was made after the British Empire champion finished five rounds of sparring in preparation for his world title fight with Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis at Yankee Stadium on August 26.

Weill made the offer to Ted Broadribb, Farr's pilot, in the dressing room while Tommy lay stretched out on a rubbing table. Al said he would write out a check for $5,000 on the spot to clinch the deal and hand the remaining $30,000 to Broadribb before Wednesday.

Moreover Weill assured Broadribb that the British manager could keep the entire 25 per cent of Farr's purse from the Louis fight. Tommy has been guaranteed $65,000 for the title bout, and Broadribb's cut will amount to at least $16,500. The cut may amount to more if the ticket sale is brisk and Farr decides to take a percentage of the gate.

Costello Bows 5-3 In Legion Tourney

Endicott, N. Y., Aug. 15 (AP).—Frank Heller hurled his Plewacki Junior American Legion nine, from Buffalo, into the finals of Region 8, Section B tourney here today by turning back the Costello Post of Washington, 5-3.

By virtue of its victory, the Buffalo team will meet Trenton, N. J., at 4 o'clock E. S. T. tomorrow afternoon at Johnson Field in Johnson City.

Trenton defeated Bridgeport, Conn., 5-4, in 11 innings Saturday.

Don Budge Seeded 1st In Casino Tennis Play

Newport, R. I., Aug. 15 (AP).—Don Budge, world's outstanding amateur, will resume his major singles tennis competition tomorrow as the top-seeded player in the fifty-seventh Casino tournament.

One of the strongest international fields of the Eastern season, totaling 93 and including every one of this Nation's first ten ranking stars, will vie against the lanky Californian, who has confined his court efforts to doubles play since he and his teammates brought back the Davis Cup from England.

At The Post

WITH BILL BENNINGS

Dear Al.

Leave it to Walter E. O'Hara, the man who would build Washington a great race track if Congress would approve, to give the New England turf fans what they want. O'Hara has noticed a yen for distance races and has been quick to give the fans that brand of sport. He has arranged an endurance series, the first scheduled for tomorrow. The endurance horses will be started over the comparatively short jaunt of one mile and a furlong, but the subsequent races will be moved up to a mile and three-sixteenths, one mile and a half, one mile and three-quarters, two miles and the final—what the boys call the "blow-off," will be decided over the two miles and a furlong. The thoroughbred which distinguishes itself in this series will need be blessed with courage and stamina. As the distance increases in the series, so will the value of the purses, commencing from $1,000 in the first race and going up to $1,500 for the longest distance; with bonuses of $500 and $250 going to the owner of the animal which wins the final or two other races of the series. In these days so replete with sprint affairs, many old riders have forgotten how to ride over a distance and many of the youngsters never have learned how to rate a horse properly. It is a revelation to New England fans—as well as to many riders—to note how a horse must be rated and nursed for a final burst of speed—when the distance is "twice around and a bit."

BILL.

First race—Gene D seems to have found an auspicious spot in the opening event of the meeting. Needs only the right ride. Gleaming is in action with 97 pounds and is dangerous. Palm Island has some form that would mean trouble for the others.

Second race—Heartease needs cheap company and gets it in this field. Gets in action with only steadying weight and appears to be headed for a set of brackets. Stipulate and Ukraine to take care of the others.

Third race—Clap In has worked well and has shown enough good form to indicate that he is ready to graduate from the maiden ranks. Purple King has some speed and is dangerous. Cup Defender could take it all.

Fourth race—Que Jeu carries top weight in this group but seems to have enough class to hold the opposition safe. I'm going to string along. Crow's Flight and Bacon to complete the money bracket.

Fifth race—Accolade is ready to run another of those smashing races. Likes this track and the route suits. Black Highbrow is formidable and a contender. Clingendaal broke the mile record Saturday at Suffolk.

Sixth race—Sun Abbot meets only fair ones in this field and a win at good odds would not surprise me. Our Bud and Firing Squad appear to have edges on the others.

Seventh race—Brass Monkey has erned his oats of late and seems destined to add another purse to his string here. Would Dare is fit and ready and promises to be close. Westy's Duke probably will be a factor.

Eighth race—Moralist and Xandra probably will battle it out for the chief awards in this field. I prefer them in the order named. Red Raider is a possibility.

Best Bet—Que Jeu.

the Nats lead at the time to 7-3.

Weaver was wobbling then. Travis' muff, Walberg's single and a walk to Dallesandro filled the bases with oneout and Weaver forced one with oneo ut and Weaver forced one home with a long fly to Almada against the fence and Foxx walked to fill the bases again, but with Pete Appleton feverishly warming up, Weaver got the side out without further damage.

Adolph Kiefer Sets Record in Japan

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Aug. 15. — Adolph Kiefer, of Chicago, bettered the Japanese swimming record for foreigners for the third time tonight when he won the 50-meters backstroke in an international meet in the time of 30.4 seconds. Kiefer was timed in 30.4 and 30 seconds in the heats yesterday.

Jack Medica, of Seattle, trailed Masanori Makino, of Japan, in the 400-meter freestyle. Makino was timed in 4 minutes, 50.8 seconds, while Medica's time was 4:51. Katherine Rawls, of Miami, Fla., took the women's 100-meters freestyle in 1:09.8.

Cumberland's Pro-Amateur To Local Pair

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 15 (AP).—Al Jamison, assistant to Wiffy Cox at the Kenwood Golf and Country Club, Washington, D. C., and George Tew, amateur, today won the Cumberland Sesquicentennial pro-amateur golf tournament with a 36-hole score of 134. They had a best ball of 65 in the morning and shot a 69 this afternoon.

Andy Gibson, Bonny View course pro at Baltimore, and Dr. B. M. Baker, amateur, took second place with 67-68—135. Dale Stevens, pro, and H. H. Bowers, of Elkins, W. Va., were third with 69-69—138. Four teams tied for fourth at 139.

Twenty-seven teams competed in the tournament. George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring, took the sweepstake prize for pros in the afternoon with a score of 70, while four amateurs tied at 75 for a merchandise prize. Top money in the tournament was $400.

Bob Feller Driven From Box in Opener; 32,000 See Double Bill.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 15.—A trio of Chicago pitchers baffled Cleveland's leading hitters today and the White Sox won both games of a double-header from the Indians, 5 to 3, and 3 to 2.

Ted Lyons scattered eight hits in the opener to best Bob Feller and Joe Heving. Feller dueled on even terms with the Chicago veteran for eight innings, but the Chisox rapped Heving for five singles in the ninth to gain the decision.

A crowd of 32,000 was booing every appearance at the plate of Earl Averill and Hal Trosky.

Cruickshank, Ball Tie In Old Dominion Open

Post 289's; Play-Off Next Sunday, Chandler, Harper Stroke Behind in Third Place; Al Houghton Takes Fourth Money.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 15.—Defending Champion Bobby Cruickshank, of Richmond, shot a subpar 69 this afternoon to tie Errie Ball, Charlottesville pro, for first place in the 72-hole Virginia Open tournament and force an 18-hole playoff next Sunday for the title.

They deadlocked at 289, nine strokes over par.

Picking up eight strokes on the leader on the last 36 holes, Cruickshank barely missed a 69 that would have given him his fifth straight championship without further ado. Landing in a trap on his second shot on the last hole, he pitched out short and required two putts for a five, one over par.

Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, 1932 champion, ended in third place with 290.

Ball, who set the early pace with the tournament's low round of 68, added rounds of 76 and 73 to his first day total of 140, even par.

Cruickshank, staging an uphill battle after opening rounds of 78 and 70, carded a 72 this morning to come within four strokes of the leader, and then turned on the steam in the afternoon to come home in a dead heat.

With Cruickshank, constantly creeping toward the front, Ball gave a brilliant exhibition of underpressure golf in the afternoon with a row of four birdies, starting on the 282-yard thirteenth. The dazzling string of 3-3-3-4 enabled him to forge ahead of the consistent Harper, who took a one-stroke lead in the afternoon round when Ball required a six on the par-five seventh. Ball, Harper and Jimmy Watts, Lynchburg amateur, played in the same threesome.

Cruickshank, out in even par on the afternoon round, also unloosed a string of birdies on the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth to turn in the only round of the tournament except Ball's first that bettered par.

Al Houghton, Old Point pro, captured fourth money with 296, and Jack Isaacs, of Newport News, who got off to a bad start with an 80, ended in fifth place with 298.

Other finishers among the first 15 included Roy Creasy, of Roanoke, the low amateur, 309; Nelson Long, Hot Springs pro, and Earl Howell, Richmond amateur, tied for seventh with 311; Sam Bates, Norfolk amateur, 312; Jimmy Watts, Lynchburg amateur, 313; Earl Chisholm, Woodberry Forest pro, 314; Graham Napier, Lynchburg pro, 316; Aulick Burke, Petersburg, and Morton McCarthy, Virginia Beach, both amateurs, tied for thirteenth place with 317; Jack Lowden, Waynesboro pro, 319; Tom Hudgins, Richmond, driving range pro, 319, and Ralph English, Roanoke amateur, 320.

Typos' Title Tournament Starts Today

Washington Team Meets Boston at 11 A. M. on South Ellipse.

By Jack Munhall.

Some 500 union printers, gathered here from all parts of the country for the twenty-seventh annual International Printer Baseball Tournament, paused last night in the midst of the gala social program arranged by the local typos to attend to business at hand.

At a meeting of the executive board of the baseball committee at Wardman Park Hotel, headquarters of the visitors, plans and the schedule for the play, which begins today, were drawn up.

Pairings today pit Washington's entry against a tough foe, Boston, which is set for the South Ellipse at 11 a. m. The locals, stunned by injuries to two regular outfielders, Tom Dalgish and Jim Dewhurst, in a National City game yesterday, were encouraged by latest reports that both sturdies would be available, if needed.

Big George Mosedale probably will step on the mound today as Washington opens the fight for its thirteenth title since the oldest sandlot league in existence was organized in 1908. Although Mosedale is expected to pitch because of his better record no great surprise would be occasioned should Manager Ray Homan call on Carl Beane. The catching will be done by either Rip Sole or Mac McPherson.

The remainder of the line-up will include Charley Holbrook, Jim Dewhurst or Jim Halloran and Benny Schneider, in the outfield; Fred Waple at first base, Harry Hofberg at second, Phil Boundford at short and Ray Homan or Ed Edwards at third. It will be a veteran nine that takes the field for the locals, as only Bounford and Halloran are new to the club that advanced to the semifinal round last year.

In the other games today all beginning at 11 a. m., St. Paul faces New York on the East Ellipse, Indianapolis meets Detroit at Griffith Stadium, Chicago, the defending champion, meets St. Louis on the West Ellipse, and Baltimore meets Pittsburgh on the North Ellipse. Cincinnati, the eleventh team, drew a bye.

Entertainment for each day until the tournament is completed Saturday has been arranged by Chick Holbrook, Washington commissioner. Tomorrow afternoon the visitors will be taken sightseeing, and at night a buffet dinner-dance is scheduled at Heurich Brewery.

Armstrong's Manager Knows His Stuff

By Shirley Povich.

No green hand in the boxing business is Mr. Edward Meade who owns and operates the fighting machine known as Henry Armstrong. Mr. Meade is currently in town to let his meal ticket punch dusky Johnny Cabello around at Griffith Stadium this evening.

POVICH.

Folks most everywhere but Washington, where Petey Sarron is a sort of native son, call Armstrong the featherweight champion of the world, but handling a champion is no novel experience for Eddie Meade. The now-paunchy manager of Armstrong was virtually teethed on a ring post and at the age of 12 was rubbing fighters and swinging a towel around Hultzman's gym in New York.

At 16, Eddie Meade was the manager of a fighter and at 23, he was the manager of a world champion—Bantamweight Joe Lynch, who beat Pete Herman for the title and then won it all over again a couple of years later. Eddie Meade, who has been in the boxing business for nigh onto 30 years, has been in the smart end of the business. He doesn't bear a mark.

• • • •

He was saying yesterday at the ball park where Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn had him in tow, that Al Jolson's interest in his boy, Armstrong, is no publicity stunt; that the mammy-singer is plain nuts about Armstrong's chances of becoming the undisputed featherweight champion of the world and that it is easily understandable.

• • • •

"Why, that Jolson is the fellow who first spotted Armstrong as a coming champ when all the fight managers on the Coast weren't giving him a tumble," Meade recited, "But by the time Al was ready to do something for Armstrong, the boy was winning a string of fights in Hollywood and we had to go high for him.

• • • •

"Jolson gave me $10,000 to buy Armstrong's contract from One-Shot Ross who had him and then turned Armstrong over to me. Al doesn't have a piece of him now. We paid him back his $10,000 inside of six months and Al let me keep him. All he wanted was a rooting interest in the boy anyway."

• • • •

It seems that this fellow, One-Shot Ross, who picked the 19-year-old Armstrong out of a Los Angeles breadline five years ago, a couple of weeks after the colored lad had hopped a freight from St. Louis, came by that name honestly.

• • • •

"They named him One-Shot on account of what happened in Panama when Ross was in the Army." Meade related. "Seems like he was taking a prisoner back to the barracks when the guy started to run away. Ross let go with his musket but his aim wasn't so good. He fired one shot and killed a huckster's horse across the street."

• • • •

You never can tell when you're gonna pick up a champion, Meade was saying. "Lookit how I got Joe Lynch."

And how did Mr. Meade get Joe Lynch?

"Well, he was a kid over on the West Side who didn't have any idea of being a fighter. Used to drive his father's wagons and never even came around my gym. I had a lot of tough kids hanging around there and one of 'em tipped me off about him. Seems like he just had a run-in with 'em when they tried to steal a ride.

• • • •

"One of my kids came running back to the gym after the fight and said, 'Mr. Meade, there's a kid lives up on 125th street that'll make you a great fighter, honest. I just seen him go.'

• • • •

"I asked the lad what made him think the 125th street kid would make a great fighter and he had a fair enough answer.

"'Fact is,' the boy said, 'That 125th street kid just licked me.'"

• • • •

Meade's boy, Armstrong, has done fairly well since Jolson invested that $10,000 in his chances a year ago. Armstrong has only won 22 fights, but that is pretty significant inasmuch as he has had only 22 fights. Twenty of those battles he won by knockouts.

• • • •

There isn't much doubt in Meade's mind about what will happen on the evening of October 29 when Armstrong, the New York champion, meets Sarron, the N. B. A. champion.

• • • •

"Sarron's a clown fighter. We'll knock him out," said the man who has never thrown a punch in his life.

Junior, Boys', Girls' Tennis Play Begins

Forty-two entrants begin play this morning in the District of Columbia Tennis Association's annual Junior tournament at the Army-Navy Country Club. Davie Johnsen is seeded No. 1, just ahead of Marvin Carlott, of California, No. 2.

Tournaments for the boys' and girls' championships, which will also begin this morning at 10 a. m. and run simultaneously through the week, have drawn 16 and 13 entries, respectively. Freddie McNair, Maryland State boys champion, is seeded No. 1, with Tom Wadden, No. 2.

Charlotte Decker is seeded No. 1 in the girls' play and Margaret Duffy, No. 2.

Talkes, Corwin Manor Victors, Karaki's 73 Low at Kenwood.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A pair of favorites, Eddie Ault, medalist, and B. E. Dennell, former Kenwood star, joined two upset victors, L. H. Weisenberger and Roger Sheriff, in the semifinal rounds of the Beaver Dam Club championship yesterday, as Martin McCarthy, former winner, and Forest Thompson, defending champion, bowed during the double elimination rounds.

Sheriff, a newcomer to first-flight play at the club, took advantage of Thompson's three-putt green on the first extra hole of a second-round encounter, and turned in the day's biggest surprise by a one-hole margin. McCarthy bowed to Balestri in the first round, 3 and 2, while Johnny Miller, veteran member of the club, lost to Weisenberger in the second round, also by a 1-up margin.

Ault scored a 75 in his first-round victory over E. J. Holahan while he was forced to the last green to defeat J. Morris in the second round. Dennell scored over D. E. Mattison in the first round, 2 and 1, and was impressive in defeating Balestri in the second-round encounter, 3 and 2. The title will be decided after the final rounds next Sunday in all flights and consolations.

Peters and J. T. McCarthy, 2 and 1; Harry Pitt and Max Taylor defeated R. P. Gibson and L. T. Souder, 3 and 2.

John B. Gordon's 142 net total for the 36-hole play won the President's Cup at Belle Haven yesterday, bettering the 144 net totals of Jess Willard and Charles Elliott by two strokes. Gordon paired rounds of 94 and 96, deducting a 24 handicap on each round.

William Krause, the cross-handed veteran of the Alxendria Club, won the senior's championship, defeating J. B. Murphy on the seventeenth green yesterday, 2 and 1.

Minoru Karaki shot the back nine at Kenwood yesterday in 35 strokes, even par, and added it to an outgoing 38 to win the medal in the qualifying round of the Wiffy Cox Trophy play. Birdies on the eleventh and seventeenth holes enabled Karaki to nose out R. A. Weaver by two strokes, the latter posting a 75.

Bernie Hallock and T. B. Patterson recorded 77's to finish behind Weaver. Match play in the four flights begins next Sunday. Pairings will be announced during the week.

A pair of Beaver Dam's women golfers scored eagles on the Landover layout yesterday, Mrs. R. C. Mitchell scoring on the tenth hole and Mrs. Ora Emge on the fourth.

F. E. Berquist was the blind bogey winner at Congressional, with 84-10, 74, followed by Joe Murphy with a like score and A. E. Dowell, 89-15, 74.

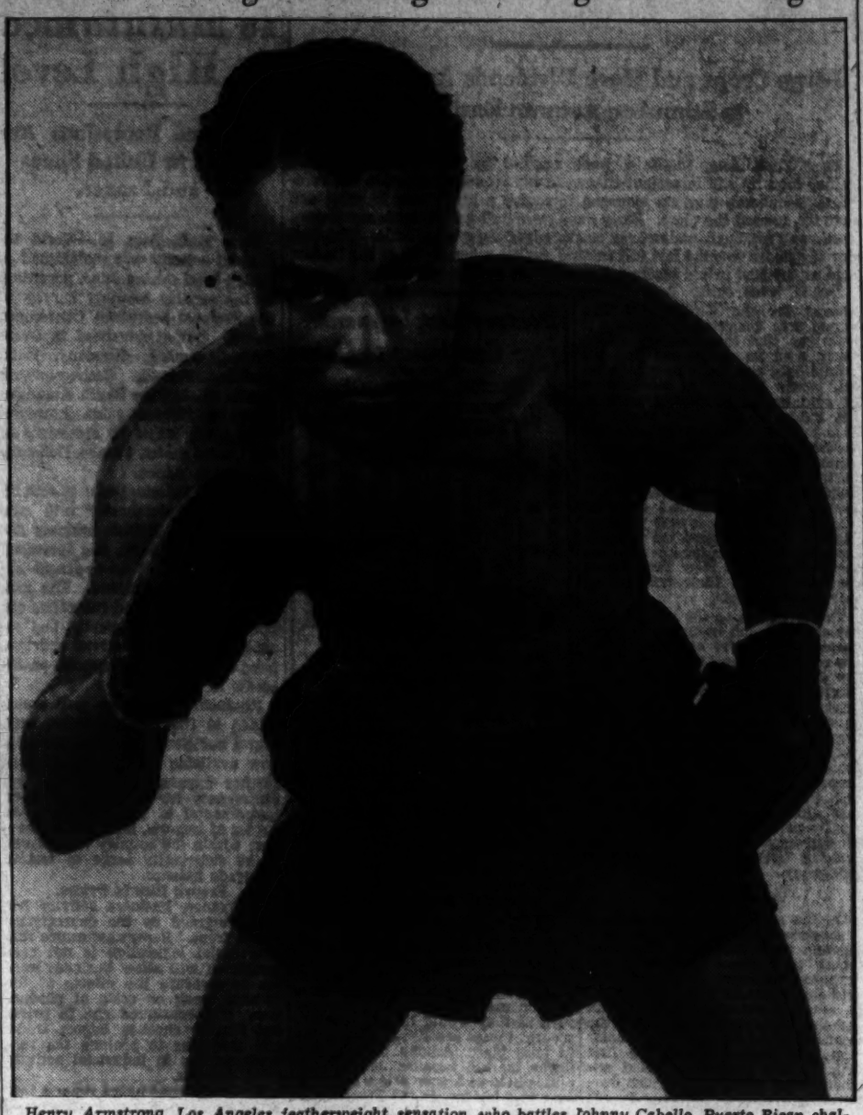
No. 1 Featherweight Challenger Who Fights Here Tonight



Henry Armstrong, Los Angeles featherweight sensation, who battles Johnny Cabello, Puerto Rican challenger, in the feature event at the ball park tonight. Armstrong, who has been matched to meet the champion, Petey Sarron, in October, will be handled by his manager, Eddie Mead, assisted by Bill (Bojangles) Robinson, world famous dancer, who is appearing at a local theater.

Browns Check Plunge, Beat Tigers by 9-7

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Aug. 15 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns, aided by walks that forced in two runs, put on a five-run rally in the seventh inning to defeat the Detroit Tigers, 9 to 7, in the final series game.

George (Slicker) Coffman, who started for the Tigers, weakened in the seventh and Jack Russell relieved him. With two on base, Russell walked three Browns, forcing in two runs.

The Browns continued their assault on Tommy Bridges, who replaced Russell, scoring three more runs. Russell was charged with the defeat.

Hemsley and Clift were the big guns for St. Louis with three hits each. Both hit a pair of doubles.

Jack Knott, the Browns' starting pitcher, steadied after the Tigers had scored six runs in the first two innings, but was relieved at the start of the seventh by Oral Hildebrand. Knott received credit for the victory.

Feather Sensation Displays Fistic Prowess Here Tonight

By Bob Garrison.

Henry Armstrong, the one-man California earthquake, who stands poised on the threshold of the featherweight division championship, is scheduled to display the talents which have carried him to his commanding position in the class that is officially ruled by Petey Sarron when he meets Johnny Cabello, Puerto Rican champion, tonight in the ten-round feature event of the weekly fight show, at Griffith Stadium.

The West Coast colored boy will rule a 3-1 favorite to defeat his West Indian opponent, and on the basis of his record, compiled since he started his eastern invasion early this year, Armstrong will be an even money bet to win by knockout.

Armstrong has risen to the top of his class, and has recently expressed a desire to win the lightweight championship from Lou Ambers, after he wins the featherweight crown.

The fight will be carried on a coast-to-coast hook-up by the Mutual Broadcasting System.

In his last 14 fights, Armstrong, who is now regarded as a sure shot for the championship, has won 14 out of 15 by knockouts. Since Aldo Spoldi was decisioned by the dusky dynamiter at the beginning of the year, 14 straight opponents have met the ignominious fate, knockout, by his riveting two-hand attack.

Chance for Cabello.

Cabello will be presented the opportunity of climbing to national ring prominence should he weather the storm and remain on his feet throughout their battle tonight. And a win for Cabello, who recently annexed the Venezuelan championship to his list of degrees, would create a disturbance in the ring game that would be heard around the world.

For it would mean that Petey Sarron, who is somewhere between here and South Africa, where he has been fighting for several months, would receive the startling news that the man whom he recently signed to fight in New York, October 29, and whom he is told is the rightful owner of the crown, anyway, had been defeated in a bout that was meant to be no more than a mark-time step for Armstrong, who is anxiously awaiting the return of the Birmingham class ruler.

Cabello, winner of 13 out of 17 bouts this year, including a 2-round knockout victory over Joey Archibald, of Providence, R. I., Washington's present ring idol, is expected to push Armstrong to the limit in giving him one of his toughest fights of the year.

Henry Works Here.

Armstrong, who arrived in town early yesterday morning fresh from his 3-round knockout over "Irish Eddie" Brink, of Scranton, Pa., in New York, last Friday, went through an hour workout at Joe Turner's Arena in the afternoon, skipping rope, punching the bag, and shadow boxing to the delight of some 500 persons who nodded approval.

One of the few men who has defeated Armstrong, Manuel, flashy Mexican fighter, who is making a comeback following a long illness, on tonight's card, when he meets Yambo Andrates, South American, in a six-round preliminary. Manuel defeated Armstrong shortly after he, Armstrong, had entered the pro ranks.

In the eight-round semi-windup, Ralph (Buddy) Scott, undefeated in 26 pro fights, meets Frankie Donofario, five times Golden Gloves champion of Philadelphia, who will be making his local debut against the George Washington University student.

Other preliminary events include a six-round bout between welterweights, George Henry, New York, and Johnny Johnson, of Philadelphia, both colored boxers, and three four-rounders, Mike Morton, former Columbus University lightweight boxer and local Golden Gloves champion, will make his pro debut against Brooks Bowen, of Richmond; Wild Bill Howell, Asheville, N. C., meets Spike Miller, Ada, Okla., and two colored lightweights, Johnny Jones, Los Angeles, and Kid Howie, Washington boy, meet in the curtain raiser at 8:30 p. m.

Star Radios Win, 6-5, in City League

Upset Dope in Beating New Deal; Read Takes 1st Place.

By Jack Munhall.

Johnny Deavers pitched and batted the Star Radio nine to a stunning 6-5 upset over New Deal yesterday in the feature game of the National City program.

The loss coupled with Read Pharmacy's defeat of White Haven broke the tie for first place with the Men's Shop in the B section and left Read in sole possession of the top rung. Deavers, who allowed the losers but 8 scattered hits, strode up to the plate with the bases saturated in the sixth and promptly won his own game with a triple.

Read easily pounded a 15-5 victory over White Haven with Ernie Boggs and Roche combining to limit the losers to two lonely hits while their mates smashed out 15, including a circuit drive by Pepper. In the other B section game 260th Coast Artillery won a forfeit over the Cardinals.

Over in the A section Rose and Heurich kept in pace as the Liquor shop defeated Union Printers, 7-3, and the Beermen dramatically nosed out the Dixie Pigs, 8-7. Rose behind steady pitching by Walter Murphy clinches the contest in Frank Merriwell fashion when Karl Nau smashed a homer with the bases saturated in the sixth inning when five runs were scored.

Heurich had to come up with a pair of tallies in the ninth to nip the fighting Pigs. In that inning Huck Stahl conceived the rally with a single, moved to second on Thompson's sacrifice and scored the tying run on Bill Shelton's double. Shelton, after advancing to third on an infield out, scored on a squeeze play as Manager Fee Collier laid down a bunt.

In the junior section George's Radio, the first-half winner, picked up where it left off, capturing its first second-half game and ninth consecutive from Browdy's by the score of 6-1. J. C. Flood, continuing to show marked improvement, verifying reports it would be a deciding factor in the new race, easily defeated Stewart Pharmacy, 6-1, with Nick Nikalson throwing a smart 7-hit game.

In other junior games Police Boys Club Five edged its brethern from No. 4 by 7-6 and Wade Auto shoved over six runs in one big inning to beat Nick Bombard, 8-5.

However, if Corr wins, and it should, it will earn a play-off series for the section championship with Deoudes which annexed the initial half.

Council Orders Water Survey At Winchester

City Acts to Obtain State Approval for Its Supply System.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Aug. 15.—Acting on the recommendation of the local board of health, the city council of Winchester has designated a committee to ascertain what steps will be necessary to obtain approval by the State board of health of the Winchester water supply.

The action climaxed a long discussion of the water situation in which members of the board of health, including Dr. P. W. Boyd and Dr. B. B. Dutton, declared they are not interested in the quantity of water but in its purity.

Opponents of a bond issue a year ago have declared that politics has prevented the city from obtaining a pure water sign issued by the State board of health.

But C. E. Meredith, assistant State sanitary engineer, who was present, stated citizens had at different times applied for such signs but in each instance they had been refused because the State standards were not met.

Filtration and softening are the two specifications which have been set up by the State and a special committee has been designated by Peyton Marshall, president of the city council, to obtain needed data.

The problem arose when Dr. L. M. Allen, a city health officer, issued advisory warnings that all water for domestic use be boiled. The warnings were based on three reports of slight contamination in the water supply. Subsequently, several reports have been returned by the State Board of Health as satisfactory.

It is estimated the proposed improvements will cost $100,000 or more.

Wealthy Evangel, William Hall, Dies

Wallingford, Conn., Aug. 15 (AP).—William Phillips Hall, 73, of Greenwich, founder of a railway signal manufacturing company and known as the "busines millionaire evangelist" because of his avocation as a lay preacher, died last night.

He and his father, Thomas Shephard Hall, invented many block and electrical railway signals and in 1889 he founded the Hall Signal Co. with headquarters in New York. An intimate friend of Dwight Moody, Hall was influenced to the extent that he became an evangelist himself.

Japanese Noble Here To Conduct Orchestra

San Francisco, Aug. 15 (AP).—Viscount Hidemaro Konoye, who resigned from Japan's House of Peers to follow his music, arrived today to show Americans how a Japanese would conduct their symphony orchestras. The scion of one of Japan's most eminent families will conduct the Los Angeles symphony in Hollywood Bowl Aug. 19.

Steel Activity Holds Against Summer Lull

Operating Rate of 84 Per Cent Is Half-Point Drop in Week.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 15.—Opinion gains that the low point of the summer is here or has passed, as far as the steel market is concerned. Yet production continues at a high rate and there are few signs of it being reduced before fall business comes to buttress mill books, says Steel.

Various factors lend support to the practically universal sentiment among steel producers that the fall will bring renewed buying from various sources. While assurance of unchanged price tends to lessen forward buying consumer goods are moving well and stocks of steel for their production are not believed to be large.

Heavy grain crops supporting farm purchasing power are being reflected in the implement and tractor trade, as well as in other consumer goods. Railroads are preparing to buy more equipment and rails, though this probably will come late in the year. Shipbuilding offers some substantial tonnage prospects and the oil industry is more active than for some time.

Export Tonnage.

Export demand shows signs of bringing considerable tonnage, both for steel and for manufactured products. Steelworks operations underwent little change last week, the national rate moving down half a point to 84 per cent. The Youngstown district lost 2 points to 78 per cent and eastern Pennsylvania 2 points to 69 per cent. As partial offsets to this, Detroit regained 10 points to 100 per cent and Wheeling moved up 1 to 94. Other centers remained at the rates of the previous week, Pittsburgh 83, Chicago 86, Cleveland 85, Buffalo 86, Birmingham 96, New England 65, Cincinnati 89, and St. Louis 77.

Resumption of production by Ford Motor Co. brought automobile output last week to 103,250, compared with 79,736 the preceding week. Ford assembled 26,000 cars, General Motors 41,865 and Chrysler 26,900, while others produced 8,485. General Motors last week was slightly under the previous week's output.

Procter & Gamble Started in a Shed

Cincinnati, Ohio, Aug. 15.—The completion of its first century of successful industrial pioneering is marked by the Procter & Gamble Co., largest manufacturers of soap and allied products in America. A hundred years ago this month William Procter, who made candles, and James Gamble, who made soap, formed a partnership. Procter had recently arrived from England and Gamble from Ireland, and they had married sisters.

They began business in a shed in Cincinnati and the partners sold their products from door to door, trundling them through the streets in a wheelbarrow. From that first shed has developed the present Ivorydale plant, which until after the turn of the century, was the only plant of the firm. There are now additional plants at Kansas City, Kans.; Port Ivory, Staten Island, N. Y.; St. Bernard, Ohio, St. Louis, Mo.; Baltimore, Md.; Hamilton, Ont.; Macon, Ga., and Dallas, Tex. Procter & Gamble also owns and operates many large cottonseed crushing mills throughout the cotton belt. Its foreign operations include plants in England, Cuba and the Philippines.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Large Crops and More Dividends Are Expected to Stimulate Autumn Business.

New York, Aug. 15.—In a week marked by political maneuvering rather than by any important change in the economic situation the principal speculative markets managed to revive a little, both in price and activity, toward the close. Early days were dull with a tendency toward weakness, although undercover stocks edged forward a little. The best day for stocks was the last full trading session, when many of the laeders sold at the best prices reached since the spring tops were set.

Bonds were shifty with stocks, except for the Government list, which was consistently weak. It was true that the Treasury glided along with its deficit and that the public debt reached a new high total, partly because of sterilization of gold on an increasing scale as the influx of the metal increased. The market was nevertheless influenced more by money considerations than longer term factors. Partly because of Treasury operations the New York market felt a severe decline in excess deserves which reached the lowest point in years. To make good the fall and perhaps also in response to some seasonal pull, the New York banks consistently sold their holdings of Government bonds.

That pressure on the market may not continue and naturally it could be stopped (so far as money rates are concerned) any time the Treasury decided to let up on gold sterilization and to allow gold to lift reserves. Moreover, the Treasury no doubt will resort to the usual pegging operations in time for its next financing. Business activity probably will increase this autumn, propelled by the largest crops of cash products in many years, and that along with the higher commodity prices will increase the use of currency and credit, but the banking system is far from a stringency.

Autumn Hopes.

On the surface the stock market is meeting with no important selling and there seems to have been taking place some increase in investment holdings. Hope is widely held that business will come out of its seasonal recession this autumn and that corporation profits for the second half of the year will compare well with those of the first half. If the hope is fulfilled another flood of dividend disbursements will add to spending power in the next several weeks and give another fillip both to retail trade and to speculation. Not all the money will go into quick consumption, for company after company is proceeding to reimburse its working capital by new security issues, an effort to offset the debilitating effects of the forced dividend payments under the penalty tax act.

Trade statistics of last week were not highly significant. The steel industry, according to the estimates of the American Steel & Iron Institute, lowered its operating rate slightly, but the average still is high. The United States Steel Corporation reported slightly smaller shipments in July than in June, but the July tonnage was the largest in several years. General Motors announced unexpectedly large sales volume for last month, and that company, followed by numerous others, gave plans for lifting prices to offset the wage increases.

Raw material prices also are beginning to improve again and the wholesale index, in spite of the uncertainties in farm products, is at least firm. Now that retail prices are moving strongly forward the case for deflation is at least weakening. It was not helped any by the last-hour announcement of Southern Congressmen that the President had agreed to 12-cent loans on cotton selling in the market at less than 10½ cents a pound.

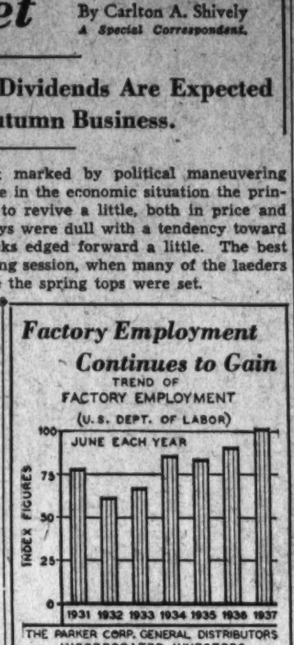
Price Fixing.

If the Government re-enters the business of trying to guarantee to farmers prices for their products which yield, not on a profit on production merely, but a high income such as they would like to receive, several things are likely eventually to take place. Among them are a lower market because of the surpluses held at higher prices hanging over it, a big loss to the Treasury, a permanent loss of foreign markets, and eventually lower prices to the producer after a period of squeezing the consumer.

The futility of wheat and cotton doles and of crop control as it is likely to be carried on by political give and take has been amply demonstrated in this country. This year, for instance, the cotton acreage rose only 10 per cent over last year. The yield per acre is estimated at nearly 38 per cent above the ten-year average. Nature always is the unknown hand in any new deal of that sort.

The most exciting news of last week from a controversial standpoint was the selection of Senator Black, of Alabama, by President Roosevelt to fill the Supreme Court seat left by Justice Van Devanter. Senator Black not only is known as 100 per cent New Deal, but is one of the authors of the 1937 version of NRA—the Black-Connery bill to fix hours, wages and production. He can be counted on to vote straight Roosevelt. Markets were affected little, if any, by the affair, probably because it had been taken for granted that an out and out New Dealer would get the appointment, and because it has been growing plainer that hope for sound legislation must come near the source—in Congress—rather than that reliance can be placed on the Supreme Court to put on the brakes.

Factory Employment Continues to Gain



THE PARKER CORP. GENERAL DISTRIBUTORS
INCORPORATED INVESTORS

Boston, Mass., Aug. 15.—Factory employment is continuing to increase. The Department of Labor index in June was 12½ per cent higher than a year ago with every major line of manufacturing showing increases for the year except tobacco manufacturers. Some of the largest gains were in metals, paper and printing and machinery.

Exports of Cotton Behind Year Ago

New York, Aug. 15.—American cotton was forwarded to mills of the world is smaller volume this week than in the corresponding week last year, according to the weekly report of the New York Cotton Exchange.

Forwardings totaled 138,000 bales this week against 193,000 last year. Total forwardings during the season to date are 275,000 bales against 378,000 in the corresponding period of last season.

Average Tobacco Prices.

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—The average price of United States type 12, grade B4F, flue-cured tobacco was 18.7 cents a pound for the week ended August 14, compared with 19.6 cents for the previous week, and 17.2 cents for the similar week last year, according to H. A. Stich, tobacco economist.

Lumber Production Exceeds Shipments

The lumber industry during the week ended August 7 stood at 80 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 68 per cent of 1929 shipments. The week's reported production was 23 per cent greater than new business booked and 20 per cent heavier than reported shipments.

National production as reported for the week ended August 7 by 7 per cent fewer mills was 2 per cent less than the output of the preceding week and shipments were 18 per cent less than shipments of that week, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturing Association from regional associations covering the operations of important hardwood and softwood mills.

World Output Is Maintained At High Level

But June Recessions Are Noted in United States and France.

New York, Aug. 15.—World industrial activity was maintained at a high level during June, according to the regular monthly survey of the National Industrial Conference Board. Output advanced in Great Britain, Canada, Germany, Italy, Austria, Poland, Czechoslovakia and in most of the South American countries. These gains, however, were partly offset by recessions in the United States, France, Denmark and South Africa.

In Great Britain, business activity moved contraseasonally into new high ground. British business has been well sustained, and increased costs have as yet no apparent adverse effect on demand. The iron and steel and related industries are operating close to capacity, and recent fears of raw material shortage have been alleviated through an increase in imports.

Production has been well maintained in Italy, and it is reported that a sufficient volume of funds is now available for the financing of further expansion. Abnormal requirements for wheat have been instrumental in bringing about an excess of imports, but the new harvest within the country is expected to be sufficiently large to restore the trade balance.

French Rise in Prices.

In France, business activity has been retarded by the depreciation of the franc. Recent assurance that new social legislation is not contemplated will allow business leaders to measure the effects of the 44-hour week on costs of production. The continued rise in prices has further checked export trade, and threatens to prolong the seasonal decline in industrial activity until October.

The conference board reports that world recovery has now progressed to the point where many countries are finding themselves progressively less able to satisfy their needs from domestic sources. Thus, despite self-sufficiency schemes, exchange restrictions, quotas, and tariffs, foreign trade has expanded substantially. Revised figures show that the physical volume of world trade in 74 countries during the initial quarter of this year rose to within 7.4 per cent of the 1929 level. Value figures do not reveal such an impressive trend, because gold prices are still well below the 1929 level. On the 1929 base the value index for May of this year stood at 46.3, as compared with 46.8 in April, and 36.6 in May, 1936.

9,311 Air-Condition Cars in Operation

Class 1 railroads and the Pullman Co. on June 30, 1937, had 9,311 air-conditioned passenger cars in operation, J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday.

Of the total number of passenger cars which have been air-conditioned, the railroads on June 30, this year, had 4,751 in service. This included coaches, dining cars and other types of passenger equipment. The Pullman Company on the same date had 4,580 air-conditioned passenger cars in service, including sleeping cars, lounging cars, and other passenger equipment.

New passenger cars on order on July 1, this year, totaled 424, compared with 177 on January 1, this year, and 139 on July 1, 1936. The Pullman Company on July 1, this year, had 161 new passenger cars on order.

Bob Burns Says—

I don't suppose there's any question but what there's a little vain streak in all of us. Some smart fella said that flattery is a whole lot like soft soap. It's 90 per cent lye.

It's like the time my Cousin Hod was callin' on his girl one evening and he suddenly looked at his watch and he says, "I'd give a million dollars just to spend one more hour with you but I can't do it—I've got to go." She was so happy because she thought an hour of her time was worth a million dollars and she shoulda let it go at that, but like most women, her curiosity got the best of her and she asked him where he had to go. He says, "Well, there's a lodge meetin' tonight and if I don't show up, they're liable to fine me 25 cents!"

Commander John A. Nugent and Commander-elect Herbert A. Cady, of Alexandria Post, No. 24, American Legion, will head the delegation to leave this city Sunday for Danville, Va., to attend the annual Department of Virginia convention August 22-25.

Other delegates are Jones Cox, G. Raymond King, John Minnigh, Fred McLean, Harry Perdikeas, Sidney Weil, Mrs. Bess Fain, Turner Anderson, Franklin DeDier, P. F. McConnell, Capt. George Grimm, Hannon E. Norris, Maj. C. L. Ladson, MacDonald Douglass, Joseph Lee, Capt. George H. Evans, Albert May, B. V. Gerald and Charles M. Shepperson.

Franklin H. DeDier, of Alexandria, will preside over the meetings of the 40 and 8 Society as Grand Chef De Gare of the State of Virginia.

Mrs. Herbert A. Cady, president, and Mrs. Franklin H. DeDier, president-elect of the American Legion Auxiliary to Post No. 24, with Miss Hazel Crown, Mrs. Edmund Ruh, Mrs. O. W. Cope and Mrs. Collum will represent Alexandria at the auxiliary convention held at the same time.

Mrs. Charles M. Shepperson, of the local unit, department treasurer, and Mrs. Margaret F. Bailey, department music chairman, both will attend the convention.

Rev. Budge in Pulpit.

The Rev. Donald Budge, of Crichton Memorial Church, Cumnock, Scotland, conducted services in the Second Presbyterian Church yesterday, in the absence of the pastor, the Rev. Dr. William B. McIlwaine.

Freeland Insley, L. J. Weinig Wed

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cambridge, Md., Aug. 15.—Before an altar banked with white gladioli and ferns, Miss Freeland Maurille Insley, a teacher at Cambridge Academy, was married yesterday to Louis Julius Weinig, of Washington, at Grace M. E. Church South, with the Rev. Jesse H. Hobbs officiating.

Miss Insley entered the church with her uncle, Rufus Wright Dean, by whom she was given in marriage.

She was attended by her cousin, Mrs. Nina Dean Mace, of Cambridge, as matron of honor, and Miss Elizabeth McMahan, of Cambridge, and Miss Rubye Roberts, of Baltimore, as bridesmaids. Barbara Kratz, of Owings, was the flower girl.

Gordon Gibson, of Washington, was the best man, and the ushers were Fairfax Oyster, Frank Rose, Harry Brunt and Isaac Brindle, all of Washington.

Following the wedding, a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dean, after which the bride and bridegroom left for a trip to Michigan.

After September 1 they will be at home at Bonifant court, Silver Spring, Md. The bride, who is a graduate of Maryland State Teachers College, Salisbury, is a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Freeland Insley. The groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. William J. Weinig, of Tiffin, Ohio.

Road Job Dooms Devil's RaceCourse

Waynesboro, Pa., Aug. 15.—The Devil's Race Course, one of the outstanding scenic points in the Blue Ridge range of the Appalachian Mountains soon will be no more.

The rock of the glacial formation is being run through a stone crusher, the material to be used in construction of the relocated highway east of Waynesboro on the Baltimore pike.

The course, a sea of rocks, has been the outdoor laboratory of many outstanding colleges. Officials of the construction company building the roadway said that all of the rocks of the Devil's Race Course will be required in the road project.

Maryland Colored Folk Mark Emancipation Day

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., Aug. 15.—Today is "Emancipation Day," a holiday to al. the colored people in Maryland and particularly those of southern Maryland, where it is celebrated even more than Christmas. Throngs of relatives and friends from out-of-town places return to spend the day in visiting and feasting. Everyone must have new clothes and there is much rejoicing.

Coming on Sunday this year the festivities began last night and will continue through Monday.

Kiwanis Session Called.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clinics Popular, Fairfax Forced To Shift Hours

Different Time Set for Health Centers After Attendance Gains.

Dr. Edward M. Holmes, jr., director of the Fairfax County Public Health Unit, has announced a revised schedule for the two county health centers because of rapidly increasing attendance.

Beginning this week, the venereal disease clinic will be held at Fairfax every Thursday at noon and at Falls Church at 11:30 each Wednesday. The well baby, pre-natal and maternity clinics will be held at Fairfax at 2 p. m. each Thursday and at 1:30 at Falls Church on Wednesdays.

During the past the two clinics have been held at the same time, Dr. Holmes said, but in view of a growing attendance it has been found advisable to set different hours. The venereal clinics are handled by members of the health department, assisted by physicians from the County Medical Society. The infant and maternal clinics have been conducted by the same personnel, with the assistance of a local women's committee.

Miss Lucy Blake, county home demonstration agent, has arranged the schedule for the home demonstration and 4-H clubs for this week.

The Woodlawn Home Demonstration Club meets today at 2 p. m. at which time a demonstration on flower arrangement will be given. Tuesday, the Oakton Home Demonstration Club will make a tour of the site for the proposed Rural Recreational Park, near Clifton Station, the club to meet at Fairfax at 2 p. m.

The Fairview Club meets Wednesday at 2 p. m., a demonstration on the preparation of vegetables to be given. A similar demonstration will be the feature of the Navy Home demonstration Club's meeting, Thursday afternoon at 2 p. m.

4-H club meetings include Popeshead Club, Wednesday at 4 p. m.; Fairfax, Thursday at 1 p. m.; Fairfax Senior 4-H Club, Friday at 11 a. m. in the Fairfax High School, and Friday the Franconia Club meets at 2 p. m. in the school auditorium.

The current milk situation in northern Virginia is to be considered by the Falls Church Young Democratic Club at the meeting Wednesday night at the home of R. C. L. Moncure in East Falls Church. Barnett C. Keith, president of the club, announced that arrangements are being made to have both sides of the Virginia milk control law discussed. A representative from a local dairy who has fought the price setting ruling of the Virginia Milk Commission, has been invited to explain the opposition, and representatives of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, who favor the ruling, will address the meeting.
